Secretary Angrily Describes Home Front as 'on Point Of Going Sour'

By Robert C. Albright

Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson yesterday warned Congress that "the war is not almost over" but total mobilization of the Nation can hasten its end and give millions of servicemen "every chance of living through this conflict."

Before the Senate Military Committee the graying War Secretary told of deepening resentment throughout the armed services over industrial unrest and "irresponsibility" on the home front.

"If it continues, it will surely affect the morale of the Army," Stimson testified. "It is likely to prolong the war and endanger our ultimate success.

"And when these troops come back to us again at the close of the war and we are faced with the acute problem of demobilization, it may have an effect on the future unity of our Nation which is disturbing to contemplate."

Solidly backing the Austin-Wadsworth national service bill, Stimson said it would not only mobilize manpower for the "most critical and difficult period" of the war, but would assure servicemen that Americans are willing to "accept the same liability which a soldier must accept for service to country."

His low voice rose in anger at times when he referred to the American home front "on the point of going sour" while our armies, victorious to date in every undertaking, were poised for the climactic continental invasion.

In one lash at disunity at home, he said: "I say we have had a situation of anarchy and this (national service) is a step to cure that situation of anarchy and to restore law and order."

Holds Congress Responsible

Throughout three hours of direct testimony and close questioning by Senate critics of national service, Stimson placed the responsibility for action on Congress. He said he had no doubt of public support for the President's recommendations for total mobilization—"only Congress needs impressing."

He reminded legislators of their pledge, in the declarations of war against both Japan and Germany, to put "all the resources of the country" into successful prosecution of the war.

"It is time for all pledges to be redeemed in acts which, alone, can

40 Strikers Ordered Up for Induction

Seattle, Jan. 19 (AP).—State Selective Service Director Col. Walter J. DeLong disclosed today that 40 men who "walked out" during a dispute at the Rayonier Pulp and Paper Co., Hoquiam, have been ordered up for induction Saturday.

Colonel DeLong said the 40 Rayonier employes had been reclassified because they were no longer engaged in war work.

The CIO International Woodworkers of America called the strike after charging three workmen were fired because of union membership.

Retirement Fund Scheme Probed

A scheme by which a Washington law firm sought to get retirement funds for former Government employes for a fee has been turned over to the grievance committee of the District of Columbia Bar Association, the Civil Service Commission disclosed yesterday.

It is reported the law firm got a list of former Government workers, and sought 20 per cent of the retirement fund due the workers when collected. The grievance committee is expected to make a decision next week.

Public Hearing Promised

Foundrymen to Vote On Plan to End Strike

Seattle, Jan. 19 (AP).—A War Department offer to ask the National War Labor Board to hold a public hearing on the wage dispute that has closed approximately 80 Oregon and Washington foundries brought an agreement tonight for a vote by the 6000 striking AFL union members on the back-to-work issue.

The agreement was announced by the regional War Labor Board after a five-hour conference between WLB officials, representatives of the Army and Navy and an eight-man negotiating committee of the Molders and Foundry Workers' Union.

The negotiating committee agreed to call union locals together Friday to consider ending the walkout on the basis of the proposal submitted by Maj. Arthur B. Krim, special labor representative of Undersecretary of War.

Major Krim's proposal was:

"As soon as the men are back to work, and on the assumption that they return to work immediately, the War Department will request the National War Labor Board to hear the merits of the case, in a public hearing, promptly upon the filing of an appeal.

"This is not a bargain, but the War Department's view as to what should be done to assure a determination of the dispute in accordance with the orderly procedure of Government and in order to avoid a work stoppage which is detrimental to the war effort."

Members of the AFL Molders and Foundry Workers Union walked out yesterday in protest over a regional WLB wage decision which denied union demands for an 8-cent raise in the $1.20 hourly wages of journeymen molders. Increases of 2½ to 7 cents were allowed in lower brackets.

Union leaders said a telegraphed appeal from the National War Labor Board would be disregarded.

"Unless concessions are made by somebody," said H. W. Sprague, chairman of the Pacific Northwest negotiating committee for the union, "the strike will proceed."

The national WLB also appealed to AFL President William Green and the AFL executive council, now in session at Miami, to intercede in support of labor's "no strike" pledge.

At Miami, Green said the council directed him to take immediate steps to cooperate with international officers of the Molders Union

Larger Figures Rejected

Bill for $300 Muster-Out Pay Passed by House Vote of 387-0

By the Associated Press

Turning down all major amendments—one proposal for payments as high as $1120—the House passed and sent to the Senate yesterday legislation providing mustering-out pay of $300 for all men and women discharged from the armed forces after 60 or more days of honorable service.

The bill, passed by a record vote of 387 to 0, amends a Senate measure calling for a sliding scale of discharge pay ranging from $200 to $500, depending on the length and place of service.

The House measure carries only two figures, a maximum of $300 for 60 or more days, and a minimum of $100 for less than 60 days, regardless of whether the service was rendered abroad or in the United States.

Not eligible are veterans whose base pay exceeds $200 a month, those whose service was performed as students, those discharged dishonorably, and those released at their own request to obtain private employment. In the latter group are most inductees released after becoming 38.

Heeding pleas of Chairman May (Democrat) of Kentucky of the Military Committee not to confuse the measure with bonus legislation, and to be mindful of the impact of the payments on the Treasury, the House rejected amendments to provide extended Army pay after discharge, to boost the maximum to a flat $700, and an aggregate of $1120, including monthly unemployment benefits, and to make merchant seamen eligible.

May estimated the bill would cost $3,600,000,000, or about two billion dollars less than the estimated cost of the Senate proposal.

Move to Get Action

Measure Banning Subsidies Sent to Floor by Senate Body

By Christine Sadler

In action designed to speed settlement of the food subsidy controversy, the Senate Banking Committee yesterday voted a 10-to-9 approval of the Bankhead bill to ban use of Government payments to hold retail food prices in line after June 30.

Unable to agree on a compromise, and yet not wanting the bill it reported out, the committee threw the bombshell onto the Senate floor at the request of Majority Leader Barkley (Democrat) of Kentucky.

Prolonged debate on the issue is scheduled to begin early next week, with the Senators apparently as divided as the committee members. The bill also extends the life of the Commodity Credit Corporation beyond February 17, but getting action completed by that date will be difficult, leaders agreed. The House approved a subsidy ban measure in November and is not expected to compromise with the Senate easily—should the latter body agree on a compromise.

If subsidies are voted down by the Senate the President is expected to veto the measure as he did a similar one last June. In his message to Congress last week he made "cost of living" legislation one of the five major requests, and administrative pricing and food agencies have declared subsidy spending is essential to cost-of-living control.

Senator Maloney (Democrat) of Connecticut yesterday asked the Senate committee to vote out an amendment allowing the subsidy to be continued in its present form. The proposal was voted down, also by a 10-to-9 vote.

"I still am hopeful the amendment will be accepted by the Senate," he said last night, "and believe its chances are better than when Congress recessed for the holidays."

Senator Maybank (Democrat) of South Carolina, staunch subsidy supporter, voted for the Bankhead bill "to get something out on the floor for settlement." Senator Taft (Republican) of Ohio and Senator Tobey (Republican) of New Hampshire, both "willing to compromise," also voted for the Bankhead bill—just to get it out.

As Senate Fight Threatens

Renegotiations Compromise Wins Tentative Approval

A Senate Finance subcommittee last night tentatively approved a compromise of the war contract renegotiation controversy which restored many of the basic provisions of the present law.

The compromise amendments, designed to head off a lively Senate fight over opportunities for excessive war profits opened by proposed drastic modification of the renegotiation law, will go before the full Senate committee today.

Ranking Finance committeemen hoped to report them to the Senate today in time to free the committee's $2,275,600,000 tax bill for passage before nightfall.

Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat) of Massachusetts said the subcommittee proposed to strike the Finance Committee's exemption of standard commercial articles from renegotiation—one of the provisions of the tax bill most vigorously opposed by war profits critics.

In addition, Walsh said, the compromise would withdraw the amendment retroactively exempting from renegotiation subcontracts covering articles not component parts of actual war items.

He indicated the subcommittee had also dropped another controversial amendment exempting articles furnished in obedience to War Production Board directives.

The present law's definition of subcontracts would be retained under the compromise, but the entire machine tool industry, which Walsh said has made enough tools to "last 15 years" and faces a post-war let-down, would be totally exempt from renegotiation.

Two of the Finance Committee's original amendments—which had been almost equally in controversy—apparently would be retained. These provide for court review and for consideration of taxes and reconversion costs as general factors in renegotiation.

The compromise apparently turned on the recent Finance Committee agreement on a "cut-off" date for the renegotiation law. Under it, the termination date would be December 31, 1944, with the President given discretion to terminate the law six months in

Telegrams Of Briggs Subpenaed

Ickes Appears Before Grand Jury In Investigation Of 'Hopkins Letter'

By Joseph Paull

All telegrams sent or received during the past year by George N. Briggs were put under subpena last night after Secretary Harold L. Ickes told reporters he was informed Briggs, his suspended assistant pictured on the Senate floor as a go-between in publication of the disputed "Hopkins letter," has not been located.

However, Tom C. Clark, assistant attorney general in charge of the criminal division of the Justice Department, later said that Briggs was known to be in the District of Columbia. He said that Briggs would appear when called on.

Ickes appeared before the District Grand Jury for 50 minutes yesterday afternoon after a Justice Department agent left the room with what appeared to be "blow-ups" of the missives in the case. The central piece of evidence is a letter predicting Wendell Willkie as the Republican presidential nominee.

Harry Hopkins, whose name appears at the bottom of the letter, was still too ill to appear before the grand jury. A Justice Department official previously had said that the letter was a forgery.

Ickes Visits Grand Jury

Ickes, his arm in a sling, went through the Municipal Court basement lock-up to get to the grand-jury room. As he entered, he replied to a question, with the quip that he would plead "nolo contendere."

Ickes later described Briggs as a "good writer who knew his English." He said Briggs began working for the Interior Department in 1941, editing documents and other writings as to style, emphasizing "Briggs never was a policy man."

Henry Schweinhaut, special assistant to the Attorney General and in charge of the inquiry, said he hoped to have Briggs as his next witness whenever the grand jury has further hearings on the case. But last night Briggs had not yet been served with the subpena nor could he be reached at his Fairlington, Va., home.

Telegrams Subpenaed

Subpenas were sent out to Western Union and Postal Telegraph offices for all telegrams sent to or from Briggs during 1943 and up to last night. Addressed to Washington, Akron and New York, the subpenas also asked for all telegrams of C. Nelson Sparks, author of the Lines From North Blasted; City's Waterworks Said To Be 'Destroyed'

By the Associated Press

Heavy bombers of the Fifteenth Army Air Force and mediums of the Twelfth Air Force have temporarily isolated Rome from the north by cutting off all rail connections, photograph interpreters said last night at a bomber station in Italy.

This information was made public almost simultaneously with a disclosure by the Rome radio that waterworks of the Eternal City were "destroyed" yesterday in an Allied air attack on the outskirts of that city.

While there was no Allied confirmation of the Rome report, the radio said that Liberator bombers carried out the attacks, and that Viterbo, 50 miles north of the city, and other places in Lazio province were included in the targets.

Asked to Save Water

"On orders of the governor of the city," the Rome radio asserted, "the population was asked to use water as sparingly as possible in order to avoid being without it. Repairs now are in progress."

Railyards and other targets in the city's suburbs were attacked last week.

The photograph experts said that the almost rally raids against communications had left only one of the three major lines down the Italian Peninsula open at present. This was the east coast line from Ancona to Pescara, which supplies the Germans opposing the British Eighth Army.

The daily communique did not mention yesterday's Rome assault, as usual confining itself to the operations of the day before. It told of smashes at five rail centers and an airdrome north of Rome, when again the raiders met no interference from German planes.

Rail Yards Blasted

The targets for the Fortresses and Liberators were rail yards at Pisa, Pistoia, Poggibonsi, Pontedera and Certaldo and the airfield at Pistoia.

The Liberator crews assigned to Pisa reported good results and Fortress men, who went to the other places, said they were well covered with bomb bursts. At Pistoia, a railway bridge was straddled with bombs.

In addition to the heavy bomber forays, medium Mitchells escorted by Warhawk fighters, attacked a viaduct and rail targets at Terni, north of Rome. Other Warhawks made strafing assaults at Ploca, Yugoslavia.

'Authorized Informants' Say:

Bolivian, Argentinian Chiefs Met at Home of Nazi Envoy

Montevideo, Uruguay, Jan. 19 (AP).—Authorized informants said today information exchanged between 18 American republics had shown that Bolivian revolutionary leaders were in contact with Argentine nationalists in the home of Count Karl von Luxburg, former German minister of Buenos Aires, before the December 20 coup.

The exchange between the 18 republics was made in connection with the question of whether to accord recognition to the new Bolivian regime, headed by President Maj. Gualberto Villarroel.

The informants, whose names must remain secret, said evidence had been collected to prove that members of the Uruguayan opposition party (presumably the Nationalist Party led by Luis Alberto de Herrara) also participated in the meeting.

Victor Paz Estenssoro, finance minister in the new Bolivian regime, was reported to have received "some millions of Argentine pesos" at the meeting.

The sources stated that their information was received through at least two different diplomatic channels.

Plan Reported to Create Bloc

The disclosure followed repeated rumors, unconfirmed, that the present Argentine government of President Gen. Pedro Ramirez, the only American government maintaining relations with the Axis, has countenanced an Argentine nationalistic plan to creat a "southern military bloc" including not only Bolivia, but also Chile, Uruguay and even southern Brazil.

Recent private reports from Rio de Janeiro said a story was heard in diplomatic circles there that a series of putsch-like revolutions, timed to coincide with the European invasion, were being prepared.

Both the Rio de Janeiro reports and the Montevideo sources said the Chilean government knew in advance that Argentine nationalist and army leaders were trying to get Chilean army officers to revolt against the regime of Chilean President Juan Antonio Rios last December.

World War I Minister

Montevideo sources said Paz Estenssoro and other Bolivian nationalists met the Argentine leaders, including Manuel Fresco, former Governor of Buenos Aires province; Carlos Ibarguren and some members of the military government including Vice President Edelmiro Farrell in Count Luxburg's house on the outskirts of Buenos Aires.

Count Luxburg was German minister in Buenos Aires during the first World War until he was declared persona non grata upon the discovery by the U. S. State Department that he was advising his government that Argentine ships on the high seas should be sunk without trace.

He arrived again in Buenos Aires some three years ago with the ostensible purpose of residing on his lands in Argentina. His name now is mentioned for the first time in

Allied Relationship Now Biggest Topic In Russian Capital

Moscow, Jan. 19 (AP).—The relationship between Russia and her Allies, Britain and the United States, was the biggest single topic of conversation in the Soviet capital tonight, and the subject has the whole town jittery.

Pravda's peace rumor story Monday had developed as the biggest political news in Russia since the beginning of the war, excepting perhaps the Teheran conference.

Persons who might not have attached much importance to Pravda's publication of the Cairo dispatch concerning a reported meeting of two Britons and Nazi Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop now have changed their minds. Now they are attaching great importance to it.

Foreign observers do not like the situation at all, chiefly because they

8 Jap Ships At Rabaul Hit, Three Sunk

33 Enemy Planes Probably Downed In Big Air Fight

Allied Headquarters, New Guinea (Thursday), Jan. 20 (AP).—Through more than 100 Japanese planes and a heavy curtain of antiaircraft fire, torpedo and dive bombers pounced on 12 Japanese merchant ships at Rabaul Monday, hitting 8, definitely sinking 3 and probably sinking 2 others. Three more were seriously damaged.

During the big New Britain air battle, announced today by Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters, at least 18 and probably 33 enemy interceptors were downed by the bombers and their escorts. The loss of 12 raiders was acknowledged.

The bombers, flying from Solomons bases, went in at Rabaul on the seventeenth raid there this month at 1 p. m. Monday to find eight ships anchored on the west side of Simpson Harbor and four more in Keravia Bay, a few miles south. Three Nipponese destroyers were circling the bay.

Japs Claimed 102 Planes

(Prior to the Allied report, Tokyo said approximately 200 American planes took part in the raid and 102 were shot down. The communique acknowledged the sinking of two ships.)

Today's Japanese air losses in the Rabaul area raised the definite total to 152 with 42 more probables, as announced this month. Allied losses were 32 planes, although 11 merchantmen were sunk or probably sunk.

Tommies Establish Bridgeheads Across Garigliano River

By Edward Kennedy

Algiers, Jan. 19 (AP).—Loosing a strong new offensive along the ancient Appian Way to Rome, British troops of the Fifth Army have smashed across the lower Garigliano River and established bridgeheads at three points in the face of furious German resistance, Allied headquarters announced today as American artillery poured shells into Cassino preparatory to an assault on that stronghold.

A German broadcast said the Fifth Army had launched "several divisions" against Nazi positions east of the Gulf of Gaeta, and that "fighting is in full swing." The Garigliano empties into the Gulf of Gaeta 80 miles southeast of Rome.

This was the first important action in the coastal area of the Fifth Army front since Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark's forces reached the eastern bank of the Garigliano over two months ago.

Three British assault forces struck early Monday night and met a curtain of fire. The right wing fought its way across the river near the village of Suio, 7 miles inland from the coast,

'Smacks of Disloyalty'

Morgenthau Hits Tax 'Rebel;' Like Treason Charge, She Says

By the Associated Press

Secretary Morgenthau, taking note of a woman industrialist's call for business to follow her example in putting aside postwar reserves out of tax money, said last night that "to advise citizens to refuse to pay taxes—particularly in time of war—smacks of disloyalty."

"Such an attempt," the Treasury head added, "is especially unworthy of persons profiting from war contracts."

Morgenthau made no direct reference to Miss Vivien Kellems of Westport, Conn., or her address to a civic group in Kansas City Tuesday in which she said she had not paid her December 15 income tax installment and urged that others in business follow her example. She asserted present tax rates are unconstitutional and confiscatory.

In a statement, which he said he issued "in response to inquiries from the press," Morgenthau declared:

"Most Americans are proud to pay their taxes to help win the war. The Treasury, which deals with millions and millions of taxpayers, has constant evidence of this patriotic spirit.

"As it should be in a democracy, taxes are levied by a Congress elected by the people. We in the Treasury are charged by law with collecting these taxes, and we must fulfill that duty.

"Anyone or everyone has a right to advocate changes in the law by due legislative process.

"However, to advise citizens to refuse to pay taxes—particularly in time of war—smacks of disloyalty.

"Such an attitude is especially unworthy of persons profiting from war contracts."

(At St. Louis, bewildered by the furor caused by her speech advocating a postwar reserve "out of taxes," Miss Kellems, last night asserted that Secretary Morgenthau's charges were "too serious," to answer at once but declared she would answer them "and in full."

("Why, he's practically accusing me of treason," she said.

19-Mile Gain May Open Way For Soviet Blow At Foe's Rear

London, Jan. 19 (AP).—In terrific twin thrusts to free Leningrad entirely from its 2½-year siege, the Red army smashed 12 miles ahead through the city's outskirts on a 25-mile front today, seizing two key fortresses, and a broad outflanking movement farther south ripped 19 miles across three strategic railways.

The second drive, on a 31-mile break-through in the German lines north and west of Lake Ilmen, threatened to let the Russians in behind the Nazis who face Leningrad, and already had outflanked the important city of Novogrod both to the north and the south.

The push immediately before Leningrad, however, was the day's most signal victory. There, the Russian communique said, 20,000 Germans have been slaughtered since Saturday.

Guns Captured

In addition, said the communique and an order of the day by Marshal Stalin, that five-day offensive of Gen. Leonid Goroy has:

Stormed and captured the heavily-fortified towns of Krasnoye Selo and Ropsha; retaken Peterhof, summer home of the Czars; captured more than 1000 Germans, smashed seven German divisions, and taken many of the 16-inch guns with which the Nazis have constantly shelled Leningrad.

In all, 195 guns were captured, including 86 of 152 to 406-millimeter calibers (6 to 16-inch), which had been shelling the city from 15-mile range.

After blasting through an intricate maze of steel and concrete fortifications, "our advancing troops have come up against a second, equally strongly built line of fortifications," the communique said.

Novgorod Virtually Isolated

Seventy-five to 100 miles south, on the Volkhov River front north of Novgorod and on Lake Ilmen directly south of that city, the Russians announced that Gen. K. A. Meretskov's forces had cut the Leningrad-Novgorod direct rail line at Bolotnaya, a more easterly line at Podberechye, and both the highway and railway between Novgorod and Shimsk to the southwest.

This left Novgorod isolated except for the new railway running through the marshlands due west to Luga.

Still farther south, 300 miles below Leningrad in the area north of Novosokolniki, the Russians announced capture of several more populated places in a continuing offensive, while on the First Ukraine Front they took Goshcha, 18 miles east of Rovno on the main highway to that threatened Nazi rail center in old Poland.

The Germans continued to counterattack in the far south, around Khristinovka, but all their attempts were reported repulsed with heavy losses.

In the great breakthrough at Leningrad's outskirts, the Russian communique mentioned capture of the town of Volosovo. This apparently was not the railway town shown on most maps 45 miles southwest of Leningrad and only 40 miles from the Esthonian border, as Stalin's order of the day clearly defined the area of the advance as still some distance eastward.

Japs Attacked All Ships Leaving Coast

DeWitt Cites Evidence Of Wide Espionage In 1941-'42 Period

By James F. King

The War Department revealed yesterday that Japanese espionage activity on the West Coast immediately after the attack on Pearl Harbor was so effective that for several weeks following December 7, 1941, "substantially every ship leaving a West Coast port was attacked by an enemy submarine" and in at least three instances Japanese undersea raiders had precise information concerning vital military installations ashore.

The disclosures were made by Lieut. Gen. J. L. DeWitt in a final report on Japanese evacuation of the Pacific Coast. The evacuation of more than 110,000 persons of Japanese ancestry took place in the spring of 1942 under the direction of General DeWitt who was then commanding general of the Western Defense Command. In a foreword to the report, War Secretary Stimson praised General DeWitt and the army "for the humane yet efficient manner in which this difficult task was handled."

DeWitt said there were many evidences of communication with enemy submarines by persons ashore with positive knowledge of our installations and he cited three "most striking illustrations."

Installations Shelled

"On February 23, 1943, a hostile submarine shelled Goleta, near Santa Barbara, Calif., in an attempt to destroy vital oil installations there," DeWitt said. "On the preceding day the shore battery in position at this point had been withdrawn to be replaced by another. On the succeeding day, when the shelling occurred, it was the only point along the coast where an enemy submarine could have successfully surfaced and fired on a vital installation without coming within the range of coast defense guns.

"In the vicinity of Brookings (Mount Emily), Oregon," the general continued, "an enemy submarine-based plane dropped incendiary bombs in an effort to start forest fires. At that time it was the only section of the Pacific Coast which could have been approached by enemy aircraft without interception by aircraft warning devices.

Batteries Bombarded

"Similarly, a precise knowledge of the range of coast defense guns at Astoria, Oreg., was in the possession of the enemy. A hostile submarine surfaced and shelled shore batteries there from the only position at which a surfaced submarine could have approached the coast line close enough to shell a part of its coast defenses without being in range of the coastal batteries."

DeWitt said that after persons of Japanese ancestry had been removed from the Pacific Coast there were almost no interceptions of suspicious or unidentified radio signals and shore-to-ship signal lights, and attacks on shipping were materially reduced.

Significant Distribution

Distribution of the Japanese population on the Pacific Coast when the war began appeared to be more than coincidence, the general said, and he cited Santa Barbara County.

"Throughout the Santa Maria Valley, including the cities of Santa Maria and Guadalupe," he said, "every utility, airfield, bridge, telephone and power line or other facility of importance was flanked by Japanese. They even surrounded the oil fields in this area. Only a few miles south, however, in the Santa Ynez Valley, lay an area equally productive agriculturally and with lands equally available for purchase and lease, without any strategic installations whatever. There were no Japanese in the Santa Ynez Valley.

"Similarly, along the coastal plain of Santa Barbara County from Gaviota south, the entire plain, though narrow, had been subject to intensive cultivation. Yet, the only Japanese in this area were located immediately adjacent to such widely separated points as El Capitan oil field, Elwood oil field, Summarland oil field, Santa Barbara airport and Santa Barbara lighthouse and harbor entrance . . ."

War Sidelights

Eden Warns Spain to Quit Soviet Front

London, Jan. 19 (AP).—In blunt terms Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden warned Generalissimo Francisco Franco today of "the most serious effect" which the presence of Spanish troops fighting alongside the Germans on the Russian front "must have on Anglo-Spanish relations now and in the future."

The warning, voiced in Commons, was couched in such strong terms as to suggest that Eden, while sidestepping an open rupture, was leaving no doubt that Britain's patience was running out over the thinly disguised Spanish aid to Germany.

Another issue which may present difficulties for Madrid and London was laid before Commons when Eden disclosed that the government had renewed strong recommendations supporting the Italian government's request for release of all Italian ships in Spanish ports.

Nazis Couldn't Take It

Madrid, Jan. 19 (AP).—All actors, singers, and dancers, mimics, and theatrical producers must obtain Vichy government permits to work in Paris theaters and night clubs, the Paris press said today. The measure apparently was adopted due to German annoyance at frequent mimicry of the Nazis in songs, verse, and pantomime.

University Rises Again

Kiev, U.S.S.R., Jan. 19 (AP).—The Russians began rebuilding the great University of Kiev, sacked and wrecked by the Germans, even while black smoke still was rising from the ruins in November, Tass said today, and the word spread.

A history student who had joined the guerillas in October, 1941, came in from the German rear lines, asked when classes would start, registered, then "left for his detachment on the same day and promised to return when studies begin."

WLB Suspends Membership Grant At Dunkirk Plant

The War Labor Board yesterday suspended a grant of maintenance of membership to the United Steel Workers of America, CIO, in its contract with the American Locomotive Co., Dunkirk, N. Approximately 1800 workers are affected. Labor members of the board dissented from the action.

Board policy is to deny the protection of union maintenance to unions which have failed to enforce the no-strike pledge.

cent repeated attacks on airdromes at Rabaul, is a good reminder "that we can't be lulled into the false sense of security that the Jap is deteriorating."

The loss of 12 of our planes, most of them fighters, also is a reminder that the skill of the Japanese pilot is not diminishing.

Enemy Vessel Sunk

Six miles off Cape Pomas, west of Rabaul, an Allied snooper plane spotted six ships Monday night and sank a 2000-ton vessel with heavy bombs.

On the western end of New Britain, the Marines who captured Hill 660 last Friday thwarted an enemy effort to get it back. The Japanese counterattacked at 4 a. m. Monday but had to retire, leaving 126 dead on the field. Japanese dead since the Marines invaded that area last December 26 exceed 3000.

Over northeastern New Guinea a heavy force of Liberators bombed the Hansa Bay region northwest of Madang and Mitchells struck with 44 tons of explosives at enemy positions southwest of Madang.

In the northern Solomons, American forces expanded their beachhead on Bougainville at Empress Augusta Bay.

Virginian Greeted by Chiefs On Visit to Island Birthplace

The following account was written by Staff Sergt. Garth P. James of 801 South Royal st., Alexandria, Va., a Marine Corps combat correspondent. It concerns a former active civic and church worker, who lived in both Virginia and Maryland. He is serving in the Southwest Pacific, where he was born and has recently met tribal chiefs, old friends of his family.

Tutuila, American Samoa (Delayed)—A United States Navy Medical Corpsman, who, before he enlisted, was a Sunday school superintendent, chairman of his local civilian defense committee, and the president of the fire department, is now here on duty in the land of his birth.

He is Pharmacist's Mate First Class Thomas William Harrison, USNR (MR), whose wife, Mrs. Dorothy L. Harrison, lives at 6305 Livingston rd., Oxon Hill, Md. He was born in Samoa 37 years ago.

Harrison is attached to a Marine air unit, serving as an X-ray technician in the medical department. He has been on this island for two months.

Born in Samoa

Harrison was born here in 1906, while his father, a civil engineer, was employed on a naval building project at this base. His family lived here until he was 2 years old and then returned to the United States, living in McLean, Va. The future pharmacist's mate went to grammar and high school in McLean.

Married in 1943, he and his wife lived in Oxon Hill, where he became active in civic affairs. He was president and second lieutenant in the Oxon Hill fire department and served as superintendent of the Methodist Sunday School. When the United States entered the war Harrison became head of the civilian defense organization of Oxon Hill and Piscataway, and also served as a member of the local selective service committee.

Enlisted in Navy

In May, 1942, Harrison enlisted in the Navy Hospital Corps and was attached for a time to the Naval Hospital at Bethesda, Md. Later he attended the Field Medical School at the Marine base at New River, N. C., and came overseas.

Harrison has spent a good deal of his free time revisiting scenes of his childhood, which, he admits, he remembers only from pictures in the family album.

"I've found several old chiefs who remember my father and mother," he says. "One of them even worked for him.

371 Jewish Refugees Leave Nazi Domain

Barcelona, Jan. 19 (AP).—A special train carrying 371 Jewish refugees from northern France, Germany and other countries under Nazi occupation left today en route for Cadiz, where the refugees will board a Portuguese-chartered ship for Palestine.

The refugees were supported by the American Jewish Refugee organization while in Barcelona awaiting arrangements to go to Palestine as settlers.

Ace Who Bagged 25 Planes Dies in Accident Behind Lines

Algiers, Jan. 19 (AP).—Wing Commander Lance C. Wade, regarded in the Mediterranean theater as the greatest fighter pilot of the war, was killed last Wednesday in an air accident in Italy, it was announced today.

WADE

The 28-year-old American ace of the RAF, who shot down 25 enemy planes confirmed and many probables before being relieved of combat flying two months ago, crashed when his small communications plane went into an unexplained spin many miles behind his own lines.

His death in a common flying accident was one of the ironies of the war, for he had faced the enemy almost daily as a combat pilot for more than two years and had had many dramatic escapes. Twice he was shot down and once walked 27 miles through the desert back to a base.

Wade, born at Reklaw, Tex., began flying at the age of 17 at Tucson, Ariz. His father had flown with the Lafayette Escadrille in the last war.

With a companion, Sidney Muhart, Wade went to Canada in the first year of the war and enlisted in the air force.

Together they fought in the "Battle of Britain" and in 1941 were transferred to the Middle East. Muhart was fatally burned when attacked while flying over enemy lines to Tobruk that year.

Wade, quiet and unassuming, tending to premature baldness, fought on with the British in the desert, in Tunisia, in Sicily and finally in Italy.

When the United States came into the war he passed up higher rank and more pay with the U. S. Air Force to "string along with the guys I've been with so long."

He was decorated with the British Distinguished Flying Cross and two bars and, in November, was elevated to wing commander (equivalent to lieutenant colonel), giving up command of his Spitfire squadron.

Troops in Algiers Charge Officers Monopolize WACS

Algiers, Jan 19 (AP).—Col. Oveta Culp Hobby, director of the Women's Army Corps, shook hands with 500 WACS today on a trip of inspection and said she did not receive a single complaint from them.

Asked why enlisted WACS in this theater were permitted to have dates with male officers while this was prohibited in other areas, she replied, "that is due to the policy of the commanding general here."

She said she did not know the reason for the rule, which has been the subject of complaints from many soldiers who say they can't get dates with WACS because "the officers get them all."

Nazis Free Division From Balkan Trap

Yugoslavs Fight Four Major Land Engagements

London, Jan. 19 (AP).—The Yugoslav Partisan army, still lacking heavy armament for a decisive campaign, fought on desperately in four major land engagements in Yugoslavia today.

The heaviest fighting centered at Lipovac in western Bosnia, where a German motorized division of some 400 vehicles was surrounded and then relieved by a second division which broke through on the road to Jajce.

Yugoslav units took the offensive in eastern Bosnia with a main thrust toward Tuzla, the Partisan buletin said, and heavy fighting continued in Herzegovina and in Croatia.

There were indications today that the Allies were planning to blast a wider path across the Adriatic. The communique of Allied headquarters in Algiers disclosed that destroyers during the week shelled ports from Durazzo northward, including Korcula and Rovigno on the Istrian Peninsula. British coastal forces, dashing in near the coast of Brac Island below Split, torpedoed a small enemy ship and attacked a Siebel ferry. Reoccupation of Brac by a German marine force was acknowledged by the Partisans yesterday.

To Prevent War

U. S. Must Stay Armed, Wilson Says

New York, Jan. 19 (AP).—Charles E. Wilson, vice chairman of the War Production Board, proposed tonight that the United States adopt a continuing policy of armed might as "insurance against disaster" in the form of another war."

His suggestion, theme of an address prepared for delivery before the Army Ordnance Association which sponsors national preparedness, urged such a program to keep industry "scientifically and technologically ready for war."

Wilson spoke after a score of representatives of industry and the armed services had expressed similar desires that partnership between industry and Government be continued to keep the Nation forever ready.

Would Retain Plants

Maj. Gen. L. H. Campbell, jr., chief of ordnance of the United States Army, similarly urged that the Nation's great armament production facilities be kept intact—"to meet whatever military requirements may demand."

Wilson asserted the inevitable tendency after war is for science and industry to turn to other fields. He wants also to keep ahead of the rest of the world in munitions.

"I am not proposing a doctrine of aggression and brutality," he commented, "simply a realistic point of view, that the tendency to war is inevitable, just as the human tendency to disease is inevitable . . .

"I am well aware that sentiments such as these have traditionally been met by the cry of 'war monger.'

"To answer such views, I am convinced that had our country possessed this type of setup, it would have been the most effective insurance against the Pearl Harbor attack.

'For Preparedness'

"What I am proposing is the harnessing of the technology and science of the services and of industry—for preparedness . . .

"I am convinced that we must begin now to set the machinery in motion, while it is still possible for us to measure the cost of any other course.

"The peaceful temperament of the American people is well known. We can possess the mightiest and deadliest armament in the world without becoming aggressors in our hearts, because we do not have that intoxicating lust for blood and power which periodically transforms the German military caste."

Outlines His Program

In his "rough outline" of such a preparedness program, Wilson suggested:

The program should be the responsibility of the Federal Government.

It must be supported by Congress, through resolution or legislation, and through appropriations.

Industry's role is to cooperate—unhampered by "political witch hunts of the antitrust variety," or by "a merchants-of-death" label.

Spaatz Against Placing Stress On Air Losses

Lieut. Gen. Carl Spaatz, commanding general of the Allied Strategic Air Force, yesterday replied to criticisms of delay in reporting results of recent American bombing attacks against Germany with the assertion that too much emphasis is being given to reporting losses and that this sometimes helps the enemy. He also referred to recent bombing operations as "air invasions," indicating a preference for that term over the words "air raids."

The War Department said it had discussed with Spaatz an effort to avoid delays like that which took place on January 11 when the Germans claimed to have inflicted twice as many losses on the American air forces as we had actually suffered.

Spaatz said bad weather over England dispersed the returning American planes so that information had to be obtained from widely scattered individuals. "First information," he said, "indicated possibility of a complete failure, which changed to evidence of a highly successful operation as data were assembled. It would have been a serious mistake to make an earlier guess."

The public should consider air operations of this magnitude in the same light as major ground and sea operations which, though land operations take longer, are essentially very similar, Spaatz said. There will be constantly increasing difficulty, in assessing individual plane results, he said, because of the large forces involved.

"Forces employed now approximate 100,000 men, of which 7000 participate in direct combat, and this number will increase materially. Enemy mobilization in all categories to meet each air invasion approaches one milion or more. Therefore, it is appropriate to deal in groups, wings and divisions in al general commentaries and in official reports and discussions . . . In conclusions, I feel strongly that nothing but factual information should be sent you and that delays incidental to making information factual are inevitable."

Mysterious Woman Shoots D. C. Wife in a Chicago Hotel

Chicago, Jan. 19 (AP).—Mrs. Frank Starr Williams, 55, wife of a U. S. State Department official who lives at the Fairfax Hotel, 2100 Massachusetts ave. nw., Washington, D. C., was shot and seriously wounded tonight by an unidentified woman assailant in the fashionable Drake Hotel.

Dr. T. J. Coogan, Drake Hotel physician, said the bullet, of large caliber, penetrated Mrs. Williams' forehead just above the right eye and entered the brain. He termed her condition serious, but said she retained consciousness and described the shooting.

Mrs. Williams, the wife of the former commercial attache of the U. S. Embassy in Tokyo, was taken to St. Luke's Hospital.

Woman in Persian Lamb

Police said that a bellboy, Walter Shauke, reported the woman who fired the shot wore a Persian lamb coat and a flowered hat and appeared to be about 30 years old.

She first fired at Mrs. Williams' daughter, Mrs. Patricia Goodbody, who also was in the hotel apartment, but missed, police said.

Officers said the woman was believed to have entered the apartment and lurked behind an open door until Mrs. Goodbody came out of a bath room.

Mrs. Goodbody, 28, is the wife of a British banker of Bombay, India, and recently returned from that country.

Daughter Tells of Shooting

Police said Mrs. Goodbody gave this account of the shooting:

"My mother and I had been to a hairdressers; we arrived at her apartment at about 6 b'clock. As my mother put the key in the door, she noticed it was already unlocked. 'That's strange,' she said, I'm positive I locked the door when I last went out.'

"We went in, however, and thought nothing more about it. We sat around for about 20 minutes, then removed our outer clothing I went into the bathroom, and while there I noticed a movement behind the door. I called out, 'Mother, is there anyone else in the apartment'?

"Just then a woman stepped out from behind the door. She was gray-haired and wore a black fur coat, and either a hat with red trimmings or flowers, or a red scarf. I don't know which. She held a gun in her hand. She pointed it straight at me. I became petrified and bent over, my hands covering my face. Then she fired. The bullet hit near me.

"Then the woman ran out of the bathroom. I heard at least two shots. I ran out, and saw my mother lying on the floor. I ran into the hall, screaming for help.'

[A coincidence noted by police and reported by the International News Service was the Persian lamb coat and a flowered hat, similar to that which the gunwoman wore were found in Mrs. Williams' closet.—Editor's note.]

Husband Flying to Chicago

Williams, who is 55, left his apartment in the Fairfax Hotel, 2100 Massachusetts ave. nw., last night, saying he would fly to Chicago. He said his wife had gone to Chicago, a week ago to visit their daughter.

A native of Fannin, Miss., Williams had spent many years in the Far East and was United States commercial attache in Tokyo prior to Pearl Harbor. He returned to this country in the first repatriation of Americans from the Far East in 1942 on the Gripsholm.

Mrs. Williams' former husband and the father of Mrs. Goodbody is Edgar Born of Chicago.

Churchill Allays Tank Output Fears

London, Jan. 19 (AP).—Prime Minister Churchill said today that Britain, reinforced by supplies from the United States, now is amassing adequate armored equipment.

In a written reply to a question in Commons, Churchill declared: "I am not anxious at the present time about our tank production and equipment. We are receiving excellent supplies from the United States. Our own production now is on satisfactory lines in quality and character and I've no doubt our forces will be well equipped."

Navy Bombers Stab Jap Base In Carolines

Pearl Harbor, Jan. 19 (AP).—Navy bombers struck deep into Japan's Pacific island empire January 17 in an attack on an enemy air base on Kusaie Island in the Carolines, about 700 miles east of the vital naval base of Truk, Admiral Chester W. Nimitz announced today.

It was the first attack on Kusaie, about 700 miles west of the new American bases in the Gilbert Islands, from which the raid presumably originated.

Navy patrol planes bombed shore installations and all craft returned. Apparently there was no interception over the target area.

The same day bombers of the American Seventh Army Air Force struck at Mili, in the Marshal Islands, and again all planes returned safely.

Kusaie is 330 miles southeast of Ponape, strong enemy base and administration center of the eastern Carolines. It is six miles wide and nine miles long with at least three good harbors.

A nuisance raid by Japanese planes on Tarawa in the Gilbert Islands at dusk Monday caused no damage, the Navy announced.

Cooperatives' Role Praised By Roosevelt

By the Associated Press

President Roosevelt said last night he looked forward to "the contribution that the cooperative organizations throughout the world will make to the years of peace that lie ahead."

Mr. Roosevelt's message was read to an evening session of a conference on international cooperative reconstruction which opened yesterday under the sponsorship of the Cooperative League of the U. S. A.

The Chief Executive's letter, addressed to Murray D. Lincoln, league president, said:

"The weavers of Rochdale who founded modern cooperative enterprise balanced independence with interdependence, self-interest with good will, and action with foresight. Any effective handling of the problem of the relief and rehabilitation of the victims of Axis aggression must be based upon these same considerations."

Public Benefits Cited

The conference also was told that expansion of consumer-owned enterprises has placed in the hands of the people "the tools to fashion their own destiny—if they'll use them."

The statement came from Lincoln, who declared that people are trying to find their way into a new world that will not contain the paradox of hunger in the midst of plenty.

"They are going to get what they want, either by evolution or by revolution," he added.

He shared a luncheon session with Prof. Shih-chi Hu, secretary of the Cooperative League of China, and the Rudolf Molin, director of the Kooperativa Forbundet of Sweden.

Tell of Successes at Home

Both told of the success of cooperatives in their countries and called for application of the cooperative theory to postwar international trade. The conference also heard Dr. James P. Warbasse of London, member of the central committee of the International Cooperative Alliance, describe the movement as a "program where the plain people of the world can go into business for themselves on an international scale."

Sir Arthur Salter of London, recently named senior director-general of UNRRA, told the conference that the spirit, tradition and outlook of cooperatives was in complete harmony with the United Nation's plans for postwar recovery.

Britain Designs 50-Passenger Plane For Postwar Use

London, Jan. 19 (AP).—Britain is designing a 50-passenger transatlantic transport plane to carry the nation's color in the postwar race for civil air supremacy, Lord Beaverbrook, Lord Privy Seal, told the House of Lords today.

The new plane, to be named "Brabazon," will fly 250 miles an hour, weigh more than 100 tons, and will be able to span the Atlantic in 15 hours, said Beaverbrook, in charge of coordinating civil air policy for peacetime. It will be able to carry 2 tons of mail in addition to 50 passengers, he added.

Soviet Press Plays Down British Denial

do not know what to make of it. As one well-informed source said:

"I didn't know whether the Russians were serious about this at first. Now I know they are downright serious."

Officially, the Russian government remained silent.

The Soviet press gave the Russian people news of the British foreign office denial but it carried only a brief news dispatch on the denial and it made no comment.

Failure to publish the text of the British denial gave some worry to British authorities. They felt that it would have been better if the Russian press had printed the text of the denial rather than the item they did carry—a one-paragraph story from Tass, the official Russian agency, quoting the British agency Reuters.

At the same time, the Soviet press sprinted a story from London quoting the Ankara correspondent of the Sunday Times of London as saying that while it was true that the German ambassador to Turkey, Franx von Papen, had not made peace proposals, it was not true that peace proposals had not been made recently by the Germans.

Publication of this story put the question right back where it was when Pravda printed the original story.

The first reaction of the ordinary Russian to publication of the Sunday Times story was, "You see, something is up." Many Russians who may have discounted to some extent the original story now are convinced that the British have been listening, if nothing else, to peace proposals from Germany.

U. S. Not Involved

Allies Won't Split, Red Magazine Says

London, Jan. 19 (AP). — The Moscow magazine "War and the Working Class" said today that Hitler's hopes of splitting the Allies were buried forever by the decisions of the Moscow and Teheran conferences and added that "the peoples of the countries Allied with us and their responsible leaders must understand the efforts being made by Nazi elements."

However, the magazine article, reported in a Reuters dispatch from Moscow, denounced "underground activity of defeatists in the United States and Britain" and called for cleansing of the political atmosphere from poisonous gases" spread by the Nazis in an attempt to split the Allies.

Investigation Urged

New York, Jan. 19 (AP).—The Daily Worker, commenting editorially on the Cairo peace rumor published by Pravda, said today "such people as are capable of exporing the possibilities of a separate peace with Ribbentrop or any other Hitlerite representative" should be thrown out of public office.

"Instead of rushing to print with slanderous statements about Soviet diplomacy intentions, as many of our newspapers are doing, the Cairo item should be taken seriously," the editorial said. "If it is untrue, it should be spiked. Britain and the United States are the only ones that can do it. It certainly should be investigated. . . .

"As long as defeatists and pro-Fascist forces here and in Britain are free to operate, they constitute a danger to victory and to realization of the Teheran declaration.

"The influence of such forces reaches into government circles. Are we not well aware of the activities of such elements in our own State Department as the Berles and the Bullitts? And in Britain, there is a long-standing public demand that unreconstructed Munichites (among them, Sir Samuel Hoare is often mentioned) be removed from government posts."

Reich Reporetd Planting Rumors

London (Thursday), Jan. 20 (INS). The British press discerned today a new German plot to "divide and survive."

The latest story, obviously of German manufacture, was published in the Geneva newspaper La Suisse and cited reports from the Reich that a quasi-official Nazi representative had flown to Ankara in an effort to open separate peace discussions with Soviet personalities.

La Suisse reported that Adolf Hitler had presided at a Berlin conference of his highest aides at which the discussion centered on a "sensational global upset"—namely the establishment of a German-Russian-Japanese alliance.

As a result, the Swiss paper said, a German courier was reported to have been sent by plane to Ankara with "important instructions" for Baron Franz von Papen, German Ambassador to Turkey.

"In a certain sense, the courier might be considered an official representative of the Reich to the Soviets," said the report as published in La Suisse.

British Advance On Appian Way

where it still was locked in hard combat.

A second force hit at a point about 4 miles from the sea. Still a third bridgehead was established at the village of Argento, almost on the coast itself. The Appian way at this point is only 2 miles from the sea. The Nazis lashed back with a strong but futile tank attack at Argento.

Primary objectives of the new coastal drive are the Nazi-held ports of Formia and Gaeta, approximately 9 and 12 miles, respectively, from the point where the Appian Way crosses the Garigliano. In establishing bridgeheads at three points the British appeared to have made the first breaches in the Nazis' so-called Gustav Line.

With Cassino under almost point-blank artillery fire, American and French patrols probed its defenses, which run along the western bank of the Rapido River and include scores of gun emplacements and machine-gun nests on the ridges behind Cassino.

An official military commentator said there was nothing to support published reports that American patrols had clashed with German troops inside Cassino, though they had made quick thrusts across the Rapido north of the town to feel out enemy positions.

Canadian troops who opened an attack along a 1000-yard front near the Adriatic two days ago were reported by the Cairo radio to have captured a hill a mile northwest of San Tommaso. Allied headquarters, however, said the Canadians had been forced to withdraw before Nazi counterattacks after taking limited objectives.

Soviet Magazine Hits Polish Chiefs

of all such relations are in the interest of Poland itself, as well as in the common interests of the firm and long cooperation of the peace-loving peoples of Europe."

The article accused the Polish government of being favorable to Hitler before the war and even of preparing "to go to war on the side of Hitlerite Germany."

"This became difficult because Hitler decided to make a victim of Poland instead of an ally," it said.

(In London Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told Commons the Soviet-Polish frontier question was "extremely difficult and delicate" and cautioned, "I am sure the House will feel the utmost reserve should be practiced at this particular moment."

(Eden disclosed that Britain is in constant touch with both sides in an effort to bring about a friendly settlement and observed, "We are not without hope that a favorable solution may be obtained." The British government, however, still is awaiting Moscow's reply to the offer of Secretary of State Hull for United States mediation in the dispute.)

Maritime Union Asks Rosevelt to Run Again

New York, Jan. 19 (AP).—The National Council of the CIO National Maritime Union today called upon President Roosevelt to run for a fourth term "as the best guarantee" that his five-point program," which includes a National Service Act," "will be achieved."

"He stands out as the one man who can chart the proper course for America and bring us safely into port," its resolution said.

Bears That Fought On Train Arrive At Hollywood

Hollywood, Jan. 19 (AP).—The four bears who became five, then six, then five as they journeyed across the continent a few days ago, are four again.

One of the mama bears gave birth to twin cubs on the train. This and a free-for-all bear fight made express messengers wonder why they hadn't entered some other line of endeavor.

One cub died at once and was buried on the desert. Rose Kress, associate trainer, nursed the surviving 7-ounce twin, feeding it a mixture of milk and bourbon whisky. Today it was disclosed that it, too, has died.

"Personally, I think she went a little strong on the milk," a movie prop man commented.

'Superdestroyer' To Be Floated Jan. 25

New York, Jan. 19 (AP).—The USS Taussig, a "superdestroyer" named in honor of the late Rear Admiral Edward David Taussig, will be launched Tuesday, January 25, at Staten Island, the Bethlehem Steel Co. announced today.

A company statement said that the new 2200-ton destroyers of the Taussig type had more fighting power that World War cruisers and were designed largely for use in Far Eastern waters.

Ersatz Baby Pants Lead Complaints On Civilian Garb

The Office of Civilian Requirements is getting more complaints about the quality of wartime waterproof baby pants than any other civilian item.

Austin Grimshaw, OCR survey director, told a fashion group today that 70 per cent of the complaints registered in a national survey were voiced against the material used in the pants as a substitute for rubber.

Next on the list—55 per cent—was the quality of elastic tape, another reflection of the rubber shortage. Women's hosiery produced only 50 per cent of the gripes, though Grimshaw said he wondered why there weren't more complaints.

2 Nazi Planes Destroyed

London, Jan. 19 (AP).—Several large German flying boats were discovered sitting like ducks at a base at Stavanger, Norway, and one was destroyed today by British Mosquitos on offensive patrol over the Norwegian Coast. The patrol shot down another enemy aircraft in flames before coming home unscathed.

"We will win the European war in 1944"

But he does add one big "if": "The only thing needed for us to win the European war in 1944 is for every man and woman, all the way from the front line to the remotest hamlet of our two countries, to do his or her full duty."

We must buy extra War Bonds now to win the war in 1944

connection with Nazi activities in South America.

The informants said that protestations of pro-Allied sentiments being made in Bolivia were contingent upon developments. They stated that in case new regimes created in southern South America under the leadership of Argentina formed a solid group, the countries might be persuaded to follow the Ramirez government in a "nationalistic neutrality" movement.

While Argentine nationalistic groups recently were declared dissolved by the Ramirez government, Col. Enrique Gonzalez, Ramirez's secretary, made it clear some days ago that those groups inspired the June revolution in Argentina and added that they would be allowed to function again when they were reorganized.

A report from Rio de Janeiro said diplomatic sources in the Brazilian capital identified Col. Juan Peron, minister of war, as the strong man behind the military revolution schemes.

Nonrecognition Of Bolivia Forecast

By the Associated Press

A decision on recognition of Bolivia's revolutionary government may be made relatively soon, Secretary of State Hull said yesterday, and the belief here last night was that the verdict will be "no."

The Secretary intimated that questions of pro-Axis influences in Argentina may be brought to a head about the same time.

The United States and all other American governments except Argentina, where another revolutionary force moved into office last June, have withheld recognition of the month-old La Paz regime pending a joint investigation to determine whether Axis activities contributed to the Bolivian overturn.

The parallel questions of Bolivia and Argentina were brought up at the Secretary's conference by inquiries regarding a story published in the New York World Telegram to the effect that Axis elements have so far penetrated the Argentine regime that a refuge for Adolf Hitler is being prepared in that country.

Honoring Bolivia With Victory Ship Held Up for Study

The ship-naming committee of the U. S. Maritime Commission, after considering the advisability of assigning Bolivia's name to one of the new Victory ships, has passed the problem along to the State Department for a decision, it was learned Tuesday.

Vessels have already been named for 11 of the 34 United Nations, and Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, commission chairman, has sent letters to diplomatic representatives here informing them of the honor paid their respective countries. (The United States has not recognized the revolutionary government of Bolivia, headed by Maj. Gualberto Villarroel.)

The first Victory ship named for one of the United Nations—the S. S. Czechoslovakia—is scheduled to slide down the ways today

Names for 10 other of the new-type vessels were announced as Poland Victory, Britain Victory, Norway Victory, Luxembourg Victory, Netherlands Victory, Belgium Victory, China Victory, Greece Victory, USSR Victory and United States Victory.

Nitroglycerine was invented in 1846 by Ascanio Sobrero.

Labor Seeks Curb On Vinson's Powers

Drive to Restrict Authority Over Wages Takes Form in Wake of Rail Settlement

By Ben W. Gilbert

A drive by organized labor to restrict the authority of Economic Stabilizer Fred M. Vinson over wages was in the making yesterday in the wake of the railroad wage settlement.

Leadders of railroad labor, in particular, believe that they have a reasonable chance for success when the Stabilization Act which will expire June 30 comes up for renewal in Congress.

The labor officials would like to write a set of standards into the act providing for more "flexible" wage controls, but scrapping the "Little Steel" formula. They would favor spelling the standards out in sufficient detail to restrict Vinson's discretionary authority—which is now huge.

Price-Wage Tie Favored

Instead of Little Steel, labor officials may urge the adoption of a formula tying prices to wages.

Strategically, the labor chiefs might coordinate their drive with an expected effort by the congressional farm bloc to liberalize the food price standards now written into the act in some detail. Since 1944 is a political year, and since many Congressmen who voted for the Smith-Connally Antistrike Act would welcome opportunity to square themselves with labor, union leaders believe they have a good chance to prevail.

Meanwhile, railroad union leadership was expected to urge the House Interstate Commerce Committee to defer action on special legislation depriving Vinson of authority over wage awards made under the Railway Labor Act provided the special emergency boards involved have certified that the awards conform to the Stabilization Act.

The legislation started out in the Senate to validate an 8-cent-an-hour wage award to nonoperating employes and was passed by a vote of 74 to 4 and sent to the House. A subcommittee of the House Interstate Commerce Committee rewrote it to deprive Vinson of authority over railway wages.

Modifications Suggested

The full committee met yesterday and suggested some modifications of the subcommittee proposal.

Settlement of the nonoperating dispute with an 11-to-9-cent hourly sliding scale adjustment (part in lieu of overtime pay) and return of the railroads to their owners Tuesday midnight has eliminated the need for immediate legislative action, the union officials believe. They would prefer to join with other labor units on legislation which would cover all workers.

Labor resentment against Vinson, which has been boiling for many months, flared openly in the railroad case, and in connection with his recent action virtually turning down War Labor Board decisions in cases involving five aircraft companies with plants in 10 cities. WLB is submitting additional evidence in an effort to prove that the proposed wage increases will not unstabilize other wage rates in the 10 cities.

In the railroad case, the unions had secured Presidential approval of the 8-cent award until Vinson stepped in and rejected it.

Praise From Gen. Somervell

Meanwhile, Lieut. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell said goodby to the Nation's railroads with words of praise for railway management and labor and words of thanks that he is no longer responsible for the operation of the carriers.

In an informal interview, Somervell was asked how he liked being the Nation's biggest railroad magnate, and replied, "I don't like it."

The general said the Army was "gratified" that the roads showed an improvement—in the form of fewer layovers and better schedules—each day the Army was in control, but he quickly disclaimed for the Army any credit for that record.

"We had the finest kind of cooperation from the management and from the men, and that was the basic cause of the improvement."

George M. Harrison, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, also wrote Mr. Roosevelt asserting that the Nation's railroad workers were grateful for his help in disposing of the case of the nonoperating employes.

Brakeman Hurt

Charles W. Shaub, 47, of Baltimore, Md., railroad brakeman, was admitted to Emergency Hospital yesterday with fractured ribs and possible internal injuries suffered when he was thrown against a stove in the caboose of a freight train in the Bennings yards.

Clinic on Postwar Problems Planned Here by Three Groups

Another study of war and postwar problems will begin here today when the American Economic Association, the American Political Science Association and the American Society for Public Administration open a joint four-day meeting with headquarters at the Statler Hotel.

Educators and research scientists will participate in round table discussions with members of the three associations.

Joseph B. Eastman, director of the Office of Defense Transportation, will give one of the principal addresses tomorrow at 12:30 p. m. His subject will be "Public Administration of Transportation Under War Conditions."

Leon Henderson, former director of the OPA and now with the Research Institute of America, will talk on "Changing Contours of Government and Business" tomorrow at 6 p. m. On Saturday at 2:30 p. m. Representative Robert Ramspeck (Democrat), Georgia, will speak on the responsibility of bureaucracy to the people.

One of the principal meetings will be held today at 8 p. m., when J. B. Condliffe of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace will discuss the economic organization of welfare, and Clarence Berdahl of the University of Illinois will describe the need for United States leadership in the postwar world.

Other places of meeting for the various groups will be the Department of Commerce and the George Washington University Hall of Government. Those wishing to obtain reservations for the several luncheons and dinners are asked to call Dean W. Reed West of the school of government, George Washington University.

Scholarship Dance

The Father Rosensteel Council, Knights of Columbus, will hold its first annual scholarship fund dance tonight at 9 p. m. at the Washington Hotel. Funds will be used to help pay for high school scholarships. One scholarship will be awarded each fall to the student winner of a competitive examination.

I found THE WAY to an amazing NEW VITALITY..PEP!

1—Promote the flow of vital digestive juices in the stomach

2—Energize your body with RICH, RED BLOOD!

THESE two important steps may help you to overcome the discomforts or embarrassment of sour stomach, jerky nerves, loss of appetite, underweight, digestive complaints, weakness, poor complexion!

A person who is operating on only a 70 to 75% healthy blood volume or a stomach digestive capacity of only 50 to 60% normal is severely handicapped.

So with ample stomach digestive juices PLUS RICH, RED-BLOOD you should enjoy that sense of well-being which denotes physical fitness . . . mental alertness!

If you are subject to poor digestion or suspect deficient red-blood as the cause of your trouble, yet have no organic complication or focal infection, SSS Tonic may be just what you need as it is especially designed (1) to promote the flow of VITAL DIGESTIVE JUICES in the stomach and (2) to build-up BLOOD STRENGTH when deficient.

Build Sturdy Health and Help America Win

Thousands and thousands of users have testified to the benefits SSS Tonic has brought to them and scientific research shows that it gets results—that's why so many say "SSS Tonic builds sturdy health—makes you feel like yourself again." At drug stores in 10 and 20 oz. sizes. S.S.S. Co.

Asthma Mucus Fought Easy Way

Choking, gasping, wheezing, recurring attacks of Bronchial Asthma ruin your sleep and rob your blood of vitally important oxygen because you can't get air in and out of your lungs properly. But now it is no longer necessary to suffer from these terrible attacks without the benefit you may receive from a physician's prescription called Mendaco. Within a very short time after the first dose, Mendaco ingredients start circulating thru the blood, thus reaching the smallest as well as the largest Bronchial tubes where they usually quickly help liquefy, loosen and remove thick strangling mucus (phlegm), thereby promoting freer breathing and more restful sleep. In fact, Mendaco has proved so successful in helping thousands of sufferers from recurring spasms of Bronchial Asthma that it is sold under a guarantee of money back unless completely satisfactory. So get Mendaco from your druggist today for only 60c.

Stimson Calls on Congress For Total Mobilization Law

prove the sincerity and the determination of this great Nation," he declared.

Flanked by Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson, Stimson parried questions by committeemen, many of them opposed to the principle of national service. To these he said he was not indicting American labor as a whole but "segments" of it—that in some cases management was at fault. He answered that his testimony on armed service resentment over home-front conditions wasn't hearsay: "I do know that."

Will Return Next Week

The President told Congress he would not recommend national service legislation unless his entire "win the war" program was enacted—higher taxes, food subsidies, preservation of the war contracts renegotiation law and extension of the price control law.

Desirable as all of these were, Stimson testified, a national service law standing alone would produce benefits. He reminded legislators that the President did not say he would disapprove universal service if the rest of his program was not enacted.

Although the hearing ran through the lunch hour, committeemen did not complete examination of Stimson, and the War Secretary was asked to return next Wednesday. Senator Warren R. Austin (Republican) of Vermont, Senate sponsor of the bill, said he would question Stimson at that time.

In his direct testimony, the Secretary answered objections that the bill came too late, and proposals to strengthen antistrike legislation instead.

He argued that "it is never too late to remedy an injustice" and that those who thought the war is "almost over" are sadly mistaken.

"We are approaching its most critical and difficult period and that period is the one when we shall require not only a large but a flexible production," he said.

The total scale of 1944 production program must exceed 1943 to meet "emergencies greater than we have ever faced before," he told the committee.

As for the argument that antistrike legislation is preferable to national service, he said that would be treating the symptom and not the disease.

"The purpose of a national service law," he said, "is to get at this basic evil which produces the irresponsibility out of which stem strikes, threats of strikes, excessive turnovers, absenteeism and the other manifestations of irresponsibility with which we are now plagued."

Points to British Success

He said the only way that could be done was to bring home to every American that his individual duty on the home front is just as important as that which the infantryman owes to his rifle or the pilot to his plane.

He stressed that a service act would minimize the calling of strikes "by clarifying the patriotic duty of individual worker."

Pointing out that national service laws have operated successfully in Britain, Canada, Australia and New Zealand, with only rare exercise of sanctions, he said there was no proposal here to move great masses of labor—"the bulk of labor is now where it ought to be.

"But the time is coming, with the approach of battle climax, when we'll need the power to place a man and tell him: 'It's your duty to stay where you are.' We lose time in filling gaps, and we've reached the period where time means life to our soldiers."

in sending the men back to work.

Green pointed out, however, that "they are on strike legally, because they took a vote under the Connally-Smith Act. There is an instance where the law promoted a strike."

The WLB telegram, taking cognizance of that vote, told the council, however, that it "in no way relieves them of their moral obligation not to strike in wartime."

book, "One Man—Wendell Willkie," in which the letter first appeared.

Ickes, who has denied any knowledge of the letter and suspended Briggs pending disposition of the case, was asked to sign a waiver of immunity before testifying he went before the body on his own initiative.

Enforcement officers have two typewriters taken from the office of Briggs, who at one time published a legislative service" in St. Paul, Minn. It was learned simultaneously that the typing in the correspondence from Briggs to Sparks and in the Hopkins letter were similiar in that no space follows the comma in sentences.

Ickes at noon conferred with President Roosevelt. He denied, however, the visit was connected with this case, saying it was a "departmental matter."

The stationery on which the letter was written was official White House stock, but this paper is on hand at many Government offices, including the Interior Department.

Senator Langer (Republican) of North Dakota, cited the letter in support of his resolution for an investigation of Willkie's 1940 nomination. Langer read to the Senate a group of letters he said were written by Briggs to Sparks.

Pope Asks Church to Work for Peace

London, Jan. 19 (INS).—Pope Pius XII called on ranking leaders of the Roman Catholic Church today to devote all efforts toward cleansing the world of the evil which grips it and restoring peace to war-torn nations.

The Vatican radio quoted him as telling an audience:

"We are witnessing one of the most overwhelming political disturbances ever registered in the annals of the world. A new period of reconstruction will emerge. The new, reorganized world that will emerge is still, for the moment, unrevealed to us.

"Whoever has considered and pondered the past cannot deny that the evil which has come about could have been avoided had each carried his duties in accordance with Divine Providence.

"Your task precisely is to help bring about normal functioning of the human machinery. . . .

"You live in modern society. Go amidst the people. Listen to their praise and condemnation. Feel their scars with your own hands. Let your hearts feel the ache that is throbbing in their's."

Dual Victory in Pa. Rockets GOP Hopes

Rep. Halleck Hails Elections as Proof 'New Deal Is Withering at Grass Roots'

By the Associated Press

Twin Republican congressional victories in Pennsylvania Tuesday were hailed yesterday by Representative Halleck (Republican) of Indiana as "proof that the New Deal is withering at the grassroots."

"The people," said Halleck, "are determined to kill its roots in Washington, although its leaders have endeavored to graft a new limb on the plant.

"It proves also that the Republican march to victory, which began a few years back, is picking up speed as the time grows near when a great national test of free enterprise under representative government versus New Deal bureaucratic domination will be made. We believe that the people are voting now to win the war quickly and to bring the boys back home and to preserve the American way of life."

"Republican Year" Foreseen

Pennsylvania Republicans jubilantly hailed the victories as "further indications this as a Republican year."

Representative Scott, Philadelphia Republican, announcing to the House the elections of Joseph M. Pratt from the Second (Philadelphia) District, and Samuel K. McConnell from the 17th (Montgomery County) District, declared:

"Two days before the election the New Deal's news organ in Philadelphia quoted the Democratic candidate as declaring that the issue was in support of President Roosevelt and of his Administration. Throughout the campaign the New Deal candidate stressed the national character of the contest and asked for a vote of confidence in the Roosevelt Administration. The result speaks for itself."

Davis Leads in Louisiana

New Orleans, Jan. 19 (AP).—Hillbilly Crooner-Actor Jimmie H. Davis leaped into the lead of the Louisiana gubernatorial primary late today but seemed faced, under strategy permitted by State election laws, with the possibility of a hostile "cabinet" of most other State officials.

In a Democratic primary equivalent to election, if there is no runoff, Davis found himself passing Lewis L. Morgan, "old regular" candidate, whose faction might ask him to withdraw to avoid a runoff and permit their capture of Lieutenant Governor and possibly a majority of other State posts by simple pluralities.

The unofficial count gave Davis 84,699 votes to 82,530 for Morgan in 917 of the State's 1867 precincts.

The vote for the other gubernatorial candidates in 917 precincts was Representative Morrison (Democrat) of Louisiana 30,231, Mayor Sam Caldwell of Shreveport 16,797, State Senator Dudley J. LeBlanc 13,496, Vincent Moseley 3316 and Lee Lanier 1034.

Morgan forces contain several "Huey P. Long" elements. Backers of Davis is political heir of Governor Sam Jones' "reform administration."

The vote for Lieutenant Governor in 832 of 1867 precincts was Long 90,424, J. Emile Verret (Davis ticket) 58,213, State Senator Frank B. Ellis 45,257, Gladden Harrison 8545, Sam Tennant 3809, and Carl T. Jeansonne 2541.

Morgan-Long candidates for attorney general, secretary of state, and superintendent of education had comfortable leads.

Ruml Postwar Plan Stresses Need for Jobs

By the Associated Press

Banker Beardsley Ruml called upon Congress yesterday to lay the foundation immediately for a postwar fiscal policy which would insure full employment while stabilizing or reducing taxes and balancing the budget.

The man who touched off the historic legislative battle over pay-as-you-go taxation listed elimination of mass unemployment as peacetimes' first requirement, and declared Government aid and cooperation with business are essential to achieve that goal.

Ruml, chairman of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, laid before the House Buildings and Grounds Committee a nine-point program and asserted there existed no constitutional or technical reasons why it could not be adopted now "if it makes sense." It called for:

1. Appropriations for "efficient and economical carrying out of worth-while activities to accomplish our national purposes" and "no public spending for its own sake" or for the sole purpose of supporting purchasing power.

Lower Tax Rates

2. Lower tax rates "to the point where they will balance the budget at an agreed level of high employment."

3. Standardization of taxes with use of the surplus, at times of high employment, to reduce the national debt.

4. Retention of the principle of progressive income taxes and estate taxes, but lower rates on the individual income tax "to stimulate consumption and to make possible investment in new enterprise on a business basis."

5. A planned public works program "not to balance the whole economy but to help toward stabilizing the construction industry."

Social Security Revision

6. Revision of the social security program to balance the rates and benefits of the old-age security program, and to fix unemployment insurance "so that intake and outgo balance at high levels of employment."

7. Retention of the "important excise taxes for the time being" and "get rid of the rest."

8. A foreign loan program so arranged that "it will support rather than contradict fiscal policies adopted to strengthen our domestic economy."

9. Reorganization of the Federal Government's fiscal affairs to provide "clarity in policy, consistency in administration and cooperation between the executive and legislative branches."

He told the committee, now studying plans for the postwar period, that the nine-point program "would provide a flow of purchasing demand which springs authentically from the tens of millions whose tax burdens will have been reduced."

Girl, 19, Elopes With Youth, 14

Baltimore, Jan. 19 (AP).—A 19-year-old girl's telephoned announcement that she loved a 14-year-old boy and was going to live with him led her mother today to try to trace the call, believed to have come from Baltimore.

The mother, a New Yorker, said she wanted to learn more about the reported elopement and marriage of her daughter, Edna, to the truant high school student, whom the girl said she planned to support.

In Stratford, Conn., a truant officer awaits the return of the youth, who has been absent from school too long.

Marriage license records here failed to show the two had obtained a permit in Baltimore.

British Reaffirm Daily Worker Ruling

London, Jan. 19 (AP).—The British War Office has reaffirmed its refusal to accredit any correspondent of the Daily Worker, British Communist newspaper, to the armed forces, War Secretary Sir James Grigg disclosed yesterday in Commons.

Grigg said accreditation was refused because accredited correspondents had access to important military information and "in recent times some of its (Communist Party's) members or adherents have shown they are ready to subordinate the security of the state to the purposes of the organization."

OPA to Help Housewives Study Prices

Washington housewives soon will be able to learn more about wartime food buying in an experimental program of the Civilian War Services in connection with the second city-wide survey of prices by the District Office of Price Administration, the OPA announced yesterday.

Devised as an educational drive in the fight against inflation, the program will consist of lectures and "field trips" to the District's 1600 retail grocery stores.

More than 300 representatives of citizens' groups will take part in the project, Harry P. Somerville, executive officer of the Civilian War Services, and Robert K. Thompson, director of the District OPA, announced. They will be expected to report back to their organizations what they have seen and learned.

The project will begin with lectures in various parts of the city Tuesday, January 25. The following Monday registrants will be assigned to war price and rationing boards for two days of "practical field work," it was said, to acquaint them with the subjects covered by the opening lecture.

In Spite of the WHISKEY SHORTAGE

DON'T PAY BLACK MARKET PRICES!

THERE is a real shortage of whiskey in this country . . . a shortage that is bound to continue unless the Government finds it possible to permit some resumption of beverage distilling.

This shortage is caused by two factors; (1) No whiskey has been distilled since October, 1942. (2) An unprecedented demand accelerated by hoarding, speculation and illegal operators.

As has happened in the case of many other scarce commodities, black markets and bootlegging have sprung up in whiskey, too.

The responsible members of this industry condemn these conditions just as severely as enforcement officials do and they welcome and are supporting all efforts to stamp out these evils.

Your Help Needed!

The Federal and State Governments and the majority of the industry are working together to protect you against the lawless element that preyed on America during our nearly 14 years of national prohibition. But to be fully successful . . . your help is needed for it takes two to make a black market . . . a seller and a buyer.

It is not difficult for the Government to control producers' prices because these are all filed with the OPA, but it must depend on the public to be watchful of the prices it pays.

So, in spite of the whiskey shortage . . . in spite of the fact that you are not able to buy as much as you did formerly . . . in spite of the fact that, at times, you may not be able to purchase any at all . . . don't buy from bootleggers and profiteering black market operators in its full size on your dealer's wall the next time you buy. It lists the established OPA ceiling prices. Do not pay a penny more.

Don't pay a penny more than the Government ceiling price!

LOOK FOR THIS CARD

NOTE TO DEALERS . . . if you have not been supplied with a full sized copy of this card you may obtain one from your local OPA office or from this newspaper.

Let's Back Up The Government 100 Per Cent

The Conference of Alcoholic Beverage Industries, Inc., representing leading members of the industry listed below and speaking for the great majority of honest, law-abiding producers, wholesalers and retailers endorses the action of the Government in establishing ceiling prices on all distilled spirits and wines and pledges its wholehearted support in making them effective.

HOW TO PROTECT YOURSELF AGAINST PRICE-GOUGING

1 Always refer to the OPA ceiling prices when buying.
2 Pay only the established ceiling prices—not a penny more.
3 Don't buy from racketeers, price-boosters and other unlicensed agents.
4 Patronize only licensed dealers . . . those with State and Federal licenses to sell you.
5 Report any violations of ceiling prices to your local OPA district office.

Menuhin Plays Solo Concerto

By Ray C. B. Brown

Antal Dorati conducts the National Symphony Orchestra on Wednesday night in Constitution Hall. Soloist: Yehudi Menuhin. Program: Brandenburg Concerto No. 4 in G major (Bach), Violin Concerto (Bela Bartok), Symphony No. 3 in E flat major (Beethoven).

Yehudi Menuhin, the Bartok violin concerto and Antal Dorati were a combination irresistible by either the crowded audience or the National Symphony Orchestra at the fourth midweek concert of the season last evening in Constitution Hall. The soloist and the conductor read the work with an inspiring ardor that communicated itself to the orchestra with the result that the local premiere was a triumph for a contemporary masterpiece. Not since the Alban Berg violin concerto have I been so impressed by the workmanship and the content of a modern work for solo violin and orchestra.

The two concerti are naturally not in the same category, for the Berg concerto is a very personal work on a high plane of spirituality, while the Bartok concerto is a fiery fusion of Hungarian musical traits in which the composer speaks as a nationalist rather than an individual. Both works have in common an intense concentration of emotion and a dynamic quality of the utmost potency; both use modern harmonic idioms with an artistic sincerity that raises dissonance to the status of beauty.

It is pleasant to note that Menuhin's maturity is not going to be a mere continuation of his prodigious boyhood and his amazing adolescence, that he will not be content with the conventional repertoire, and that he is well on the way to be a champion of worthy new music. His technical mastery was never more superb than in the confidence with which he played the difficult solo part, and his insight into the music was evident in the phrasing, in the variations of tonal color and the subtlety of his reading. His consentience with the conductor was a fascinating thing to watch, for they seemed to have one mind in every detail of the music. Dorati's exposition of the score was as remarkable for incisiveness and clarity as was his feat of memorizing the work in two weeks.

That the Bartok concerto was first heard here in a performance so memorable and so authentic is fortunate. It is a work which will undoubtedly stand as representative of a period in musical development, for its integrity is indisputable.

To keep the program one of three B's, Dorati began the concert with Bach's G major Brandenburg Concerto and closed it with Beethoven's "Eroica" symphony. Millard Taylor played the solo violin in the Bach work and the solo flautists were Britton Johnson and Doriot Anthony.

U. S. Bombers in Burma Blanket Jap Camp

New Delhi, Jan. 19 (AP).—A strong force of American heavy and medium bombers pounded a Japanese troop camp at Kyaukchaw, northwest of Pantha, in northern Burma Monday with nearly 20 tons of bombs, blanketing the entire area, Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten's headquarters announced today. No planes were lost.

Senate Group Criticizes OPA For Liquor Ceiling Formula

By the Associated Press

The OPA formula for fixing ceiling prices on whisky drew sharp criticism yesterday from members of a Senate Judiciary Subcommittee seeking to force more straight liquor onto the market.

Regulations which attempt to determine the sale values of 3000 blends introduced since March, 1942, were the principal target. They were defended by Wilson D. Sanderson, head of OPA's beverage price section, in answer to charges that they allowed prices for some new brands far above that justified by the quality.

Reports Prices Forced Down

Sanderson reminded the committee of recently imposed regulations by which ceilings were based on the whisky's proof, the percentage of neutral spirits and the age of the straight liquor involved, and asserted that they had forced prices down 5 to 10 per cent.

Senator Ferguson (Republican) of Michigan termed the formula complicated, and agreed with Senators Kilgore (Democrat) of West Virginia and Murdock (Democrat) of Utah that liquor of inferior quality could sell at the same price as the best whisky as long as its age, proof and percentage of neutral spirits were the same.

After Price Freezing

"I think the formula is as nearly practical as we could make it," Sanderson testified. "It will stop the bringing out of new brands for the purpose of price evasion."

The committee developed that the 3000 new brands came on the market after the OPA froze prices of known liquor at March, 1942, top prices.

The Senators sought to show that other price-fixing regulations had enable whisky interests to buy up control of California's wine industry.

While OPA fixed a ceiling on wines on the basis of grapes selling at $30.30 a ton, Sanderson acknowledged, no ceiling was fixed on grapes sold to wineries and in some cases the wineries paid as high as $75 and $100 a ton.

"The small wineries," Senator Ferguson interposed, "had to sell out to the better-financed whisky interests because they were unable to continue their bulk sales under the wine ceilings and pay the prices charged for grapes." Ceilings were fixed on grapes sold to others than wineries.

Ferguson said the "big distillers" could afford to pay the higher prices and either hold their wine or convert the grapes into brands selling at higher prices.

Advice Not to Pay Taxes Denounced

use of money normally paid into income taxes for a postwar reserve, but she said the reserves should be "put into war bonds.")

Earlier, the Internal Revenue Bureau served notice that it is going to collect the December 15 income taxes from Miss Kellems, while Representative Coffee (Democrat) of Washington advocated Justice Department proceedings against her.

The Revenue Bureau gave out this terse statement: "There's no question but that we are going to collect her taxes, as required by law."

Representative Coffee, asserting her statement would injure the war program and discourage war bond purchases, said he was asking the Justice Department for summary action.

"Her statement constitutes a violation of the law," Coffee said.

Berlin Slayer Believed To Strike During Raids

Madrid, Jan. 19 (AP).—A Berlin wartime horror, a torso murderer who apparently strikes during bombing raids, was disclosed today by a police appeal in German newspapers for aid in discovering two missing heads.

Workers cleaning up bomb debris have found in different houses the torsos of a woman of about 30 and a girl about 8. Two days earlier a customs guard at the Swiss frontier found their arms and legs in a suitcase aboard the Berlin-Basil express.

advance or six months later than that date.

Only Bar to Passage

The Senate meanwhile concluded action on the revenue features of the tax bill—more than eight billion dollars shy of what the President asked. An agreement on the knotty renegotiation sections alone stood in the way of final passage.

Before the bill was laid aside for the day, the Senate rejected, 44 to 26, an amendment exempting farm cooperatives from the previously approved requirment that labor unions, farm cooperatives and other nonprofit organizations be required to file an annual financial statement. This requirement, having previously passed the House, will become law unless vetoed by the President.

Theater Tax Provision Stands

Other tax bill action:

Rejected an amendment to restore the existing 16 per cent theater admissions tax, in lieu of the previously approved 20 per cent tax.

Accepted an amendment pledging Congress to make a direct contribution when and if necessary to maintain the integrity of the Social Security old age insurance reserve fund. The pledge followed the Senate's recent vote to "freeze" Social Security payroll taxes for another year.

Senator Overton (Democrat) of Louisiana decided not to offer at this time an amendment to shorten the period in which liquor can be kept tax free in bonded warehouses. He said the proposal needed further study and would be handled as separate legislation.

Incentive Pay Approved For Paper Tube Employes

The Regional War Labor Board in Philadelphia yesterday announced the unanimous approval of an incentive wage plan for some 200 women and certain groups of male workers of the Stone Paper Tube Co., a war plant at 900 Franklin st. ne.

Rewarding "added efficiency," the board's order was based on the established WLB policy of eliminating wage inequities for women workers. Unskilled male laborers as well as production and maintenance mechanics, who will be required to do additional work as the efficiency of the women operators increases, will be tied into the system and therefore receive additional pay.

The present base rate of 50 cents an hour for experienced women workers will be continued, the WLB said, but boosts up to 60 cents are expected under the incentive plan, according to company estimates. This would equalize the wages of male and female workers doing the same job.

THE BEST BONDS COME FROM WASHINGTON

Once more you are asked to "back the attack with bonds."

Once more you are asked to match your money with the fighting spirit of millions of Americans at close grips with war.

Doesn't seem much to ask, after all, does it? And it's a request, remember, not an order.

But this is the real get-together of every national resource available. And your money is needed now as never before—not as a contribution, but as an investment so sound that few others are even comparable to it.

Forget how many bonds you are buying or have bought. Just remember that some American boy will sleep a little better and feel a little safer after you dig down deeper to buy a greater share in the world's best and safest investment.

There's a warm friendship between this glorious whiskey and the following of folks who appreciate fine rye. Naturally, the demand exceeds the supply in times like these. But we hope that some Mount Vernon will find its way to you soon. We are releasing stocks as they ripen, and we will continue to do so while our reserves hold out.

WFA Chief Predicts Huge '44 Corn Crop

War Food Administrator Marvin Jones yesterday said the country could "comfortably expect" a three-billion-bushel corn harvest in 1944, but that demands on this huge supply would be so great it would need to be used carefully.

Calling corn the spearhead of "food's fight for freedom," he declared: "If the enemies of America could see what we will see next summer when we review the tassels waving across that 100 million acres of growing corn . . . there would be less heart in them than there is even now in their troubled breasts."

Adjustments Required

Since corn accounts for two-thirds of all the country's feed grains and half of its concentrated feeds, however, adjustments will need to be made in the live animal-corn balance, he said.

This can be done, he asserted, by cutting hog production back to the 1942 figure—which was 52 per cent above the 1935-39 level—by culling 50 million nonlaying chickens from the country's flocks, and adjusting broiler production downward.

When the war years began, he pointed out, the Nation had big surpluses of grains and it was advisable to push livestock production. Pigs and nonlaying chickens, however, have been "overproduced." By getting them back in line, he said, beef cattle numbers can be maintained at 1943 levels and egg and milk production kept at current highs.

Many Demands on Corn

In addition to feed and food uses, he said, speaking on the National Farm and Home radio hour, corn is turned into "nitro-starch for explosives, into adhesives for making ammunition containers, into starch for textiles and paper products, special molds for castings for plane engines and fibrous glass cloth for bomber brake linings."

The value of America's corn crop in 1943, the WFA chief said, was more than that for the entire wheat crop plus the entire cotton crop, plus "all our sorghums for grain and forage, plus all of our barley and rye." One acre out of every four in crops in the whole United States was in corn, he declared.

Nancy Oakes Auctions Household Furnishings

Nassau, Bahamas, Jan. 19 (AP).—Nancy Oakes de Marigny, inheritor of a full share of her father's gold mine millions, offered her household furnishings for sale at auction today and declined to pay 36 cents on postage-due letters because the Bahamas government has tied up her funds.

"I can't afford it," she said at the post office. She came here from Havana, where she accompanied her husband, Alfred de Marigny, who was ordered to leave the Bahamas following his acquittal of a charge of murdering Nancy's father, Sir Harry Oakes.

Expecting a Baby?

Mother's Friend helps bring ease and comfort to expectant mothers.

MOTHER'S FRIEND, an exquisitely prepared emollient, is useful in all conditions where a bland, mild anodyne massage medium in skin lubrication is desired. One condition in which women for more than 70 years have used it is an application for massaging the body during pregnancy . . . it helps keep the skin soft and pliable . . . thus avoiding unnecessary discomfort due to dryness and tightness. It refreshes and tones the skin. An ideal massage application for the numb, tingling or burning sensations of the skin . . . for the tired back muscles or cramp-like pains in the legs. Quickly absorbed. Delightful to use.

Billed as Peppers

Onion Deal May Reach Grand Jury

Robert W. Keyser, Virginia OPA enforcement officer, said yesterday in Richmond that he expected to complete his investigation of alleged black market sales of onions in Fredericksburg, Va., and turn the evidence, which may involve a large Washington wholesaler, over to the District Attorney in Richmond by the end of the week.

Keyser said he believed that he would be justified in asking for grand jury action on charges of violating OPA price ceilings and conspiracy to violate the law against the firm or individuals.

As the evidence shows that the truck drivers signed a statement to the effect that one of the Washington partners had instructed them to deliver onions, billed as peppers and selling for $10 a hundred pounds, to Virginia customers, the conspiracy case may be developed in Washington.

Dr. Hammer, 66, Dies in Luray

Luray, Va., Jan. 19 (AP).—Dr. Virgil Hammer, for 43 years a practicing physician in Page County, died here last night following a relapse from an attack of influenza.

Dr. Hammer, who was 66 years of age, was graduated from Richmond College. He was a former coroner and health officer of Page County for 30 years.

He is susrvived by a daughter, Miss Virginia Hammer; three brothers, Dr. Loring Hammer, Oscar and Herbert Hammer, and a sister, Mrs. Dan Kemp.

Planes From Africa Checked At Airport for Fever Germs

By Walter Wood

A quarantine station to protect the Capital from typhus and malaria has been set up in Washington because of the great number of military planes arriving here from Africa, it was learned yesterday.

The disclosure was made in the annual report of Surgeon General Thomas Parran of the United States Public Health Service, transmitted to Congress.

Passengers and crews on planes landing at airports in Washington are examined for traces of the diseases and the planes themselves are gone over for the presence of malarial mosquitos.

A similar quarantine station was first established in Miami, Fla., by Dr. G. I. Dunlahoo, chief of the foreign quarantine division of public health. The Washington unit, operated by Dr. Randall B. Haas, passed assistant surgeon, was set up here in July, it was revealed.

The number of planes arriving here from the African war theater after a lapse of only 36 hours is constantly increasing, Dr. Parran told Congress, and announced that for this reason the quarantine was put into effect in the Capital "to protect the community from epidemic diseases common in Africa."

Other highlights in Dr. Parran's health report:

1. Eleven persons in 1000 died during the first six months of 1943, an increase in the mortality rate of 3.8 per cent over the same period of 1942.

2. Civilian and military venereal disease control programs last year prevented an increase of syphilis and gonorrhea among soldiers, sailors and warworkers. The establishment of a network of rapid treatment centers to determine which of the intensive syphilis treatment methods are most effective was cited as an outstanding achievement of the year.

3. Patients at St. Elizabeths Hospital numbered 9099, 40 more than in 1942; while the discharge rate increased about 1 per cent.

4. Establishment of blood plasma banks by USPHS in civilian hospitals became a Nation-wide service. By June of last year there were 158,290 units (a unit is about 1 pint) of plasma available in hospitals and reserve depots in the United States, Alaska and Puerto Rico.

Plan to Equalize Nurses' Pay Drafted

Recommendatinos calling for equalization of salaries for nurses on ward duty with those on private service are being drafted by a special committee of the Graduate Nurses Association, it was learned Tuesday.

The committee was organized two weeks ago, according to Miss Edith Beattie, executive secretary of the association. It has, however, encountered difficulties with a rule requiring special nurses to take ward duty after specified times of private service.

Ward and general service pay scales are generally lower than those for private duty nurses and nurses have laid off work rather than accept employment in the fromer groups after being on private duty, one source disclosed.

The pay for private duty nurses, one registry revealed, is $9 and meals for a 12-hour day and $6 and meals for an 8-hour day. Ward and general service nurses receive about $100, it was reported.

Routine Gains Not Patentable, Court Decides

Declaring that to grant patents to routine experimentation of large research laboratories of corporations is to "use the patent law to reward capital investment and create monopolies for corporate organizations instead of men of inventive genius," the United States Court of Appeals upheld Tuesday the denial of a patent on an automatic stock quotation board of the Teletype Corp.

The opinion of the court is expected to have widespread importance among large industrial concerns, for it limits the right of their research laboratories to obtain patents.

The court's opinion was written by Justice Thurman Arnold, one-time trust buster for the Justice Department, and Justice Justin Miller. Justice Henry W. Edgerton concurred.

Flow Rivers of Milk
Nebraska's pioneers had an abiding faith in the fundamental American doctrine guaranteeing to all the right to work, to profit thereby, to save for future needs.
Firm in that belief, Nebraskans — and the Union Pacific — have worked together for 75 years to develop the State's resources. Their efforts have been richly rewarded.
Today, "rivers of milk" flow from modern dairy farms . . . herds of livestock, fields of corn, grain and sugar beets provide essential, health-building foods for our armed forces and home-front workers. Thus, the flame of faith lightens the path to victory.
Union Pacific is an outstanding example of what it means to have faith in America, its resources, and its future. Built in Civil War days through wild, undeveloped territory . . . surviving many lean, troublesome years . . . its "Strategic Middle Route" is today one of the Nation's transportation life-lines.
These critical times have given Americans a broader understanding of the importance of their railroads. They know how tremendous and vital is the task of transporting war materials and troops. They know that despite serious handicaps their railroads are doing a miraculous job. Yes, America has re-discovered its railroads — has faith in them — just as the railroads have faith in America.

An interesting rumor reaches us which—following the example of our illustrious contemporary Pravda—we shall pass on without even bothering to investigate or confirm. The rumor is that Mr. Leon Henderson has been circulating among various lame ducks of the Administration asking them to join him in the formation of "an American-government-in-exile." As far as we know, Mr. Henderson's motive is wholly facetious. Still, on the off chance that he may be serious, we suggest that there are by this time enough busted brain-trusters and discarded New Dealers in circulation to enable Mr. Henderson to organize not only a provisional cabinet but a couple of houses of rump Congress.

If Mr. Henderson lends his time, effort and persuasive powers to organization of the government-in-exile, that, of course, would entitle him to the leadership or presidency. A number of vice presidential possibilities automatically suggest themselves. Barring the existing Vice President himself, the most suitable choice, it seems to us, would be Mr. Rexford Guy Tugwell. Time was when mothers in Park ave. penthouses and Locust Valley manor houses used to quiet their offspring by threatening them with Mr. Tugwell. But Mr. Tugwell has been so long and so thoroughly forgotten (except perhaps in Puerto Rico) that there could no longer be the slightest objection to the use of his name. For Secretary of State, Mr. Henderson would have his choice of Mr. Sumner Welles or Mr. Raymond Moley; for the portfolio of War, Mr. Woodring; of the Navy, Governor Edison; of the Postoffice, Mr. Farley; of the Treasury, Mr. Joe Kennedy; of Commerce, Mr. Milo Perkins; of Labor, Mr. Dave Dubinsky or Mr. Sydney Hillman. The portfolio of Justice offers a certain problem, to be sure, since the successive incumbents have moved on the Supreme Court, so we shall have to let Mr. Henderson solve this one himself. The portfolio of Interior might have offered another tough problem were it not for the opportune release of Mr. George N. Briggs.

Mr. Henderson, it seems to us, has time to get a ticket into the field for the 1944 elections. Of course, without State or local machines to aid it, and without an elaborate campaign fund or any further say in the matter of Federal patronage, it could not hope to make more than a feeble showing. But if the organization could be kept alive for, say, another quarter century, the government-in-exile would be swept into office almost unanimously, since by that time almost everyone will have become a lame duck of one variety or another.

Loyal Opposition

With the solemnity befitting so momentous an issue, Senator Green has asked the Secretary of War to investigate press reports that Mr. Harrison Spangler, chairman of the Republican National Committee, sponsored a survey of political opinion among our armed forces in England. Secretary Stimson, with equal solemnity, has assured the Senator that "an intensive investigation" is already under way. Whatever the outcome—and we await it with unbated breath—Mr. Spangler is liable to be embarrassed, unless, indeed, he is impervious to embarrassment. If he sponsored such a survey, then indubitably he violated War Department regulations. If he did not, then he was obviously talking through his hat when he said that the soldier vote, if there is one, would be predominantly Republican.

If a survey was actually conducted, we should like to know the precise wording of the question asked by Mr. Spangler's pollers. Not long ago the Republican chairman delivered himself of the opinion that the Republicans will win this fall "with anybody the convention chooses to nominate." It seems to us unlikely that any large percentage of soldiers, in Britain or anywhere else, would endorse this proposition. Soldiers—we are just generalizing now and have done no illegal interviewing—are inclined to feel, like civilians, that the merit of a political party is determined by the quality of the candidate it chooses and the purposes it avows. They are peculiarly allergic to nominees pulled out of the pockets of political bosses.

As the New York Herald Tribune observed cautiously the other day, Mr. Spangler "is possibly not the most disastrous chairman the Republican party has ever had." He has lost few opportunities, however, to make himself an asset to the Democrats. Some members of his party are fond of charging these days that Wendell Willkie was picked as the Republican nominee in 1940 by President Roosevelt. There is better reason for believing that Harrison Spangler was picked as Republican National Chairman by Frank Walker. At the very least, the Democrats ought to offer him a retainer.

Oleomargarine

Dairy interests which denounce price subsidies as subversively un-American show no such repugnance for subsidies in the form of a protective tariff. The curious thing about the tariff wall which has been built to guard the dairy industry is that it serves to ward off, not foreign competition, but the competition of a thoroughly domestic product, oleomargarine. The sale of margarine in this country is restricted by a variety of taxes imposed not at all for the sake of raising revenue but wholly for the sake of preventing consumers from substituting it for butter. As to the relative merits of butter and margarine we have no strong convictions. But the choice between the two, we believe, should be left to the discretion of the American public.

There is a Federal tax of one-quarter of a cent on every pound of uncolored margarine. If the margarine is artificially colored yellow, as butter is artificially colored throughout the greater part of the year, then the Federal tax on it is ten cents a pound. Any retailer who handles uncolored margarine must pay an annual tax of six dollars; if he chooses to handle colored margarine, the tax is $48. Finally, a license fee of $600 annually is imposed on any manufacturer of margarine. And the interesting catch in this regulation is that any non-governmental hospital, restaurant, boarding house or public eating place of any character is called a manufacturer of margarine if it buys the uncolored product and adds coloring to it.

These restrictive taxes were imposed at a time when a number of unpalatable, and sometimes unhealthy, substitutes for butter were on the market. Those who want the taxes continued argue that they are necessary to protect the public against deleterious products and against fraud. But we now have on the statute books a Pure Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act to serve precisely this purpose. It prescribes standards of health and nutrition for all food products and requires that their character and contents be clearly stated on their labels. No one can purchase margarine, colored or uncolored, in a grocery store under the misapprehension that it is butter.

Some danger exists, to be sure, that margarine might be substituted for butter in public eating places. A simple regulatory act could control this far more effectively than a discriminatory tax. Restaurants which choose to serve margarine instead of butter should be required to say so on their menus. They might even offer their customers a choice between butter and margarine at different prices. Certainly the opportunity to choose ought not to be denied by congressional prohibition or by taxation which amounts to the same thing.

It is unfortunate that the Maybank bill proposing repeal of the discrimination against colored margarine was debated, and defeated, in an atmosphere of unbridled sectionalism. The 23 Senators who voted for it, with only two exceptions, came from Southern States producing cotton or soybeans which are used in the manufacture of oleomargarine. They were unfortunately outnumbered by Senators from States in which dairying is an important industry. The distinction is not a sound basis for lawmaking. As Donald Montgomery, Consumer Counsel of the UAW-CIO, put it in his testimony before the House Agriculture Committee, "Margarine legislation . . . is a hangover from the feudal system under which guilds and masters controlled markets according to the power and prestige they could muster."

No Place For Politics

Senator Ferguson's prediction that the request of President Roosevelt for a national service act may be injected into the forthcoming presidential campaign has an ominous sound. It is difficult to imagine anything more destructive of wartime morale than a political row over a measure so intimately identified with vigorous prosecution of the war. Any party or individual dragging a measure of this sort into the political arena would merit very rough treatment at the hands of voters.

There are many differences of opinion, of course, as to the wisdom of enacting a national service law at this time. Those differences will be aired at length as the issue is taken up in Congress. It is wholly proper that they should be. But there will be no room in the hearings, in the subsequent debate or in later discussion for the injection of politics into this issue. The facts are that the national service bills now before Congress were introduced and sponsored without thought of politics by two Republicans. President Roosevelt waited until the eleventh hour to indorse the idea behind them, and then he did so in a wholly nonpartisan spirit because he believes that the national interest requires the placement of every man in the position where he can serve his country best in wartime.

Before the major party platforms are drafted, national service legislation will probably have been enacted or rejected. If enacted, no party could campaign against it without manifesting gross disloyalty. The cooperation of the whole country would be necessary to make the law effective in bringing the war to a more speedy close. We don't believe for a moment that any political figure would be rewarded by the electorate for making a political football of national service. For if there is one thing that the American people are demanding more fervently than anything else these days, it is wholehearted devotion to whatever is necessary to bring speedy victory.

Get Together, Boys!

For a good many weeks past, and for reasons best known to themselves, our leaders, political and military, have been trying to persuade us that victory is far, far away. Maybe it is. But maybe they thought that if we believed victory to be imminent we wouldn't buy so many war bonds, or that production might suffer, or that we might be tempted to change horses in midstream. There is certainly something more than coincidence in the sudden burst of warnings by radio and newsreels that unless we snap out of our complacency right now Hitler may win the war, after all. Maj. Gen. George V. Strong, head of the Military Intelligence Department, declared two months ago that Germany is stronger than in 1939. Last week Secretary Knox warned us against the wishful thought of an early end to the war and told us that Germany's home front will not collapse as it did in 1918. He said he felt truly sorry for the wishful thinkers. And only a week ago an anonymous official told us that the victory had been indefinitely postponed by the mere possibility of strikes.

Now the whole applecart has been upset by Gen. Henry H. Arnold, Chief of the Army Air Forces. Against General Strong's statement that Germany is stronger than ever we must place General Arnold's statement that Germany is "down to its last sock and down to the bottom of the toe of that." One statement, it seems to us, completely cancels the other, and the result is zero. The same thing could be said of the statements concerning the marvelous production records of American industry, which are almost automatically followed by statements concerning the jubilation of the enemy and the consternation of our soldiers about the deterioration of the American home front.

We don't profess to understand subtleties of psychological warfare, but it seems to us obvious that it is impossible to conduct one propaganda war at home and another abroad. Suppose, for example, that some of Germany's satellites may have it in mind to desert the New Order. Is there any simpler way to keep them in line than to say, "You may think we're licked, but our enemies don't think so. Look what the American General Whosis or the American Secretary Thingumboby has to say about how strong Germany is."

But worse than this are the confusion and distrust created by such contradictions here at home. People, as Mr. Lincoln observed, can be fooled for a time, but not all of them for more than a time. When a mind is a mass of contradictions, and it can no longer tell whom or what to believe, it often ends by believing nothing. And the net result would be to undermine confidence in the whole structure of government.

Friend Or Foe?

Whatever the shortcomings of Soviet foreign policy, it does not suffer from the defect of a split personality. Just lately, for example, the official Information Bulletin issued by the Russian Embassy here made known the views of its government respecting Generalissimo Francisco Franco, Caudillo of Spain. Apparently the Russians feel that fascism is fascism, whether it is served a l'Italienne, a la Francaise or a l'Espagnole. No matter what the sauce, they find it unpalatable.

To the Russians, General Franco is an ally of their enemy, Germany. They arrive at this conclusion on a fairly pragmatic basis: (1) Spanish soldiers are still doing their best to kill Russians on the Eastern Front; (2) Spain is supplying strategic raw materials to the Reich. But when you come to think about it, this would mean that Spain is also an ally of our enemy, or, to put it more directly, an enemy of our ally. We wonder when the Department of State is going to come to think about it. Probably not until it acquires some new thinkers.

In addition to the direct services to Germany cited by the Russians, Spain through its Falange agents has been gnawing at the amity which unites the republics of this hemisphere. The recent coup in Bolivia, if not directly inspired by falangist propaganda, was at any rate along the lines suggested by it. It looks as if it stemmed out of Argentina and thence out of Spain. To ignore or to encourage this sort of enmity under the fiction of neutrality is puerile if not psychopathic. General Franco, like other exemplars of the fuehrerprinzip which he avows, is now tottering. A little push in the right direction might be very helpful to his own people as well as to our friends and ourselves. At least we can stop propping him up.

CORSICAN HARBOUR

Two rocky horns into the sea at Calvi:
one crowned with sterile wind and currant-dropping boats, the other pink—and yellow-towered with citadel and noisy town.
The curve of shore pine-fringed is good to look upon, and hills upon the distant plain are proud and then are nothing before the glory of the snowy peak of Monte Cinto.
Up the tilted tree-lined road,
in the morning gaiety of sun,
the soldiers climb in twos and threes and primly overlook the size of mountains on the right, and on the left ignore the sea.
Upon the barren horn among the goats
a shepherd all the morning loves the sea, and in the afternoon
the height of hills.

DONALD FAIRCHILD

Soldier Vote

A Communication

THE CONCLUSION of the columnist, Merlo Pusey, in The Post for January 18, that Congress lacks the power to establish a simple, uniform Federal ballot, free of the poll tax, for servicemen in Federal elections is based upon two misconceptions. I believe that he has misjudged the constitutional meaning of republican government, and has mistakenly treated one clause of the Constitution as if it stood apart from the rest of the document.

The Constitution requires the Federal Government to maintain republican government in the several States. It has been said: "But a republic is a state in which the sovereign power resides with the electorate without reference to any basis of election." In other words, nine-tenths of the people may be disfranchised, and, if the remaining one-tenth have sovereign power to elect officers, you still have republican government. Such a definition does little more than exclude absolute monarchy. It draws no distinction between a republic and an aristocracy or oligarchy with electoral processes. It was expressly repudiated 156 years ago by the men who wrote our Constitution.

The Word "Republic"

Madison, in No. 39 of The Federalist, remarked that the word "republic" had been applied to Holland, Venice and other countries, and continued:

"These examples, which are nearly as dissimilar to each other as to a genuine republic, show the extreme inaccuracy with which the term has been used in political disquisitions.

"If we resort for a criterion to the different principles on which different forms of government are established, we may define a republic to be, or at least may bestow that name on, a government which derives all its powers directly or indirectly from the great body of the people. . . . It is essential (italics are Madison's) to such a government that it be derived from the great body of the society, not from an inconsiderable proportion, or a favored class of it; otherwise a handful of tyrannical nobles, exercising their oppressions by a delegation of their powers, might aspire to the rank of republicans, and claim for their government the honorable title of republic."

Madison made the distinction even clearer when he said in the Constitutional Convention:

"A republic may be converted into an aristocracy or oligarchy as well by limiting the number capable of being elected as the number authorized to elect."

If you will accept Madison's definition of a republic, it will necessarily alter the approach to the question of constitutionality, as far as the fundamental principles of our Government are concerned, for it is self-evident that such restrictions as the poll tax tend to produce a government which is not based upon "the great body of the people."

The other point relates to Article I, section 2, of the Constitution, which says that the electors of members of the House of Representatives shall have the same qualifications as the electors of the more numerous branch of the State legislatures. This, it has been contended, prevents Congress from providing a Federal ballot and forbidding the States to set up poll-tax requirements in Federal elections. So it would, if no other constitutional provisions or principles were involved. But it does not stand alone.

Republican Government

In addition to the duty of maintaining republican Government, Congress is empowered under Section 4 of Article I to "make or alter" State regulations of the "times, places and manner" of holding Federal elections—a clause sweepingly interpreted by the courts to give Congress power to prevent corruption and maintain the integrity of congressional elections. Does Section 4 restrict Section 2? The constitutional argument against a Federal ballot and the anti-poll-tax bill rests almost entirely upon the claim that it does not. The Supreme Court says it does.

Chief Justice Stone wrote in U. S. vs. Classic, in 1941, that the States "are authorized by the Constitution to legislate on the subject as provided by Section 2 of Article I, to the extent that Congress has not restricted State action by the exercise of its powers to regulate elections under Section 4 and its more general power under Article I, Section 8, Clause 18" (to make laws "necessary and proper").

With the Supreme Court declaring that the right of the States to prescribe qualifications may be restricted by the right of Congress to regulate elections, how can Mr. Pusey possibly say that the Green-Lucas soldier vote bill "pretends to create voting rights in defiance of the Constitution." Ten prominent law teachers and lawyers recently joined in a public statement upholding the constitutionality of the bill to repeal poll taxes as a prerequisite to voting in Federal elections. Men like Profs. Walton Hamilton and Edwin Borchard of the Yale Law School, and Dean Lloyd K. Garrison of the Wisconsin University Law School are not in favor of "tearing up the constitutional requirements for voting."

Not long ago a poll-tax Congressman tried to persuade me that the Supreme Court was interpreting the powers of Congress under Section 4 too broadly. He was utterly dumfounded when I read to him what James Madison, "father of the Constitution," said of its purpose on June 14, 1788:

"Should the people of any State, by any means, be deprived of the right of suffrage, it was judged proper that it be remedied by the General Government."

I submit that Mr. Pusey spoke too hastily on a question of constitutional law, and thereby placed himself in opposition to your often-declared principles of right and justice.

The Pravda Mystery

By Barnet Nover

When The Press Speaks Officially

HAD THE NOW famous "Cairo rumor" been published originally in the London Daily Mail or the Chicago Tribune or La Prensa of Buenos Aires or the Svenska Dagbladet of Stockholm or in one of countless other newspapers one could name, it would not have attracted more than passing notice.

Peace rumors have been a dime a dozen in this war and this particular rumor rested on an even flimsier foundation of specific fact than most of those the world has been regaled with during recent years.

In the first place, the story was datelined "Cairo", the least likely place from which such a rumor could be transmitted by ordinary means since the censorship at Cairo is extremely drastic. And, indeed, it is now evident that the Cairo dateline on the Pravda story was faked for no such story was sent out of Cairo by any Pravda correspondent (there is none in the Egyptian capital) and no such rumors were current in Cairo on the date indicated or any other time.

The fact that Pravda nonetheless put a Cairo dateline on its story suggests that the motive in so doing was to give the rumor validity by suggesting that not otherwise would it have been allowed to pass through British censorship.

IN THE SECOND PLACE the authority given for the rumor were certain unnamed "Greek and Yugoslav sources."

But how it was that Greeks and Yugoslavs at Cairo happened to know about a meeting in Spain or Portugal of Ribbentrop and "two leading British personalities" is not explained.

In the third place the actual setting of the alleged meeting is about as vague as anything possibly could be. The Pravda story places it in "one of the coastal towns of the Iberian peninsula." This gives us a choice between San Sebastian, Santander, Gijon, Coruna, Vigo, Oporto, Lisbon, La Linea, Malaga, Almeria, Cartagenia, Alicante, Valencia, Barcelona and innumerable smaller places in between.

Certainly if the "Greek and Yugoslav sources" were sufficiently well informed to know that a meeting between Ribbentrop and British emissaries occurred the least that could have been expected of them is that they were privy to the place of meeting.

It is evident, therefore, that whoever wrote that story did not even do a particularly good job of faking. The story gives evidence of rank amateurishness at every point. The veriest cub reporter should have been able to do better.

BUT IT IS PRECISELY because it was so obviously a cock-and-bull story that appearing as it did in Pravda, the organ of the Russian Communist party which is, nominally at least, the controlling political element in the Soviet Union, it stirred up so much heated discussion and produced great bewilderment. But, as a matter of fact, the results would have been the same had the story appeared in Izvestia, the official organ of the Praesidium of the Supreme Council of the USSR, or Red Star, the organ of the Red Army or War and the Working Classes which mirrors the views of the Soviet Foreign Office.

All Russian newspapers are official and thus all of them, by design or by default, speak in the name of the Russian government. This from the viewpoint of internal administration may have its advantages. It is obvious that it also has real disadvantages from the viewpoint of Russia's foreign relations. For unless there is at all times complete coordination between the policy of the government and every item appearing in every Russian newspaper the aberrations of an individual editor or writer tend to be regarded as not aberrations at all but a reflection of deliberate policy.

WAS THE "Cairo rumor" an aberration on Pravda's part or was it a carefully planned journalistic coup by the Soviet authorities?

Given the state of the press in Soviet Russia, the latter was the assumption adopted in Great Britain and the United States and there may be some truth in it although it is doubtful whether Stalin and Molotov have very much time to spare these days to supervising the insertion in Pravda of rumors from Cairo.

The fact that Moscow has since given full acknowledgment to Britain's vigorous repudiation of the rumor does suggest, however, that if the Pravda tale was officially motivated it was not carefully thought out as to consequences.

Even if, as seems possible, the Cairo rumor was designed to attract attention away from Russia's action in rejecting the Polish offer to discuss all questions of common concern to both countries and in ignoring the British and American offers of mediation and it certainly did that, the Pravda story must be set down as a bull.

Editors make mistakes, including Russian editors who even in their hangovers speak with the voice of a government which must accept responsibility for their utterances even when it had not actually got around to inspiring them.

French Renascence

I wish to thank you for your excellent editorial of January 13, 1944, "French Renascence." You have said perfectly just what France Forever has for a long time been trying to tell the people of the United States about the "Fighting French," the Frenchmen under the leadership of Gen. Charles de Gaulle.

De Gaulle, his Fighting French, and the French Committee of National Liberation have indeed been treated as poor relations by this country. Yet, as you say, they are the only hope of French renascence which is so vital not only to the cause of the Allies, but also to the construction of the postwar world.

A confession of error is always difficult. But it is to be hoped and expected that the United States will now frankly confess that it has been backing the "wrong horse" and start backing the right one. The tremendously important French contribution to the common cause must not be lost. It must not even be discouraged.

MRS. S. S. ALDERMAN,
Secretary, France Forever.
Washington, Jan. 15.

I left Paris in December, 1940, and unless opinion has changed since then, every Frenchman I knew disapproved of De Gaulle. France is a military nation and it was more than painful to those I knew to have De Gaulle talk over the British B. N. C. and condemn Marshal Petain and speak of him in the most disrespectful terms. De Gaulle, whom most people forget or ignore, was court-martialed, condemned to death.

We are not backing the wrong horse. General Giraud will continue to inspire confidence and respect. General Giraud is a soldier and not a politician. Don't forget De Gaulle was a member of the Daladier-Reynault cabinet up to the Armistice.

Fortunately our Department of State and our armed forces are running this war and not the commentators. H. B. HUFFER, Jr.

Trolley Switch Backs

There recently appeared in your columns a letter, signed by Henry Bladesford, suggesting that "Good engineering practice would be to switch back some of these northbound cars (14th st. line), say at U st. . . ." From time to time, we have had similar suggestions from patrons who ride on the 14th st. line and for that reason I am writing this letter in the hope that it will clarify the matter for Mr. Bladesford and also for some of our other patrons.

There are no facilities at 14th and U sts. for turning back the majority of the equipment (modern streamlined cars that can only be turned back at a terminal loop) on this line. Because of the war it is impossible to obtain the special rail work which would be necessary to install such facilities. However, at 14th st. and Park road there are switching facilities for double-end cars and some are scheduled to turn back at that point. When there is a southbound delay, our road inspectors endeavor to make up the gap by turning back additional northbound double-end cars at that point.

Our latest traffic checks of the 14th st. car line indicate there is adequate—but admittedly not comfortable—service on the 14th st. line during the morning rush except when a lack of crews makes it necessary to cut scheduled trips. This occurs very often because of the manpower shortage and oftimes results in the type of service about which Mr. Bladesford complains.

Through your columns please let me thank Mr. Bladesford and others of our patrons on this line for their suggestions for improving our service and also for their patience and understanding.

Soldier Votes

If the poll tax of a prospective soldier voter were paid, at least that hurdle would be out of the way.

Why can't Congress authorize the use of Federal funds to accomplish this purpose?

Drafting Women

WAC enrollment of 60,000 for the year 1943 is far short of the goal of 150,000. Thousands of women are doing nothing to further the war. Why not draft them?

French Resistance

By Paul Winkler

Arm The Underground

WHEN BERNARD de Gaulle, 16-year-old nephew of Gen. Charles de Gaulle, recently escaped from France via Spain, he told this story:

A woman of 63 whom he knew had succeeded during a lifetime of business activity in putting aside for her old age 1,800,000 francs in securities. To this she had added 800,000 francs for which she sold her business at the time of the armistice. Thus in the summer of 1940 she possessed 2,600,000 francs in liquid assets. By September, 1943, when Bernard de Gaulle last saw her, she had only 400 francs left.

What had happened to the other 2,596,000 francs? She had used them to assist the underground movement. She thought it was worth giving her life savings for this purpose. Left almost penniless, she remained content with what she had done. "It is the best possible investment," she insisted.

This spirit explains where the French underground movement gets its funds. Everywhere in France there are persons like this old lady who believe that there is no better use to which they can put their money than to finance the fight against the Germans. But if the French resistance movement can depend on French patriotism for funds, it cannot depend upon them for another necessity, for this is something which the French cannot provide: arms and ammunition.

Anti-German Fighters

Faced with a situation in which there are 20 eager anti-German fighters for every weapon the underground possesses, Emmanuel d'Astier, commissioner for the interior on the French Committee of National Liberation in Algiers, is pleading with the Allies to arm the French resistance movement. No one knows better than d'Astier how great is the need, for it was only in 1943 that he was dispatched to North Africa by the Council of Resistance in France for the express purpose of explaining its pressing need of aid and attempting to secure it.

So far, success has been lacking. Although the committee sent d'Astier to London to plead for arms for the French underground, he came back empty-handed.

Handicapped as they are by their extremely limited means, the French are harassing the Germans on their soil to an extent which makes their contribution to the common victory most significant. But, d'Astier points out, they could operate as a real army behind the lines if they were only supplied with the weapons for which he is asking. There would be no difficulty in getting the arms to the French underground. All that is needed is that the Allies supply them.

With such equipment, the French could give valuable aid to the Allies both before and during the invasion. Railway sabotage could be carried out on a much greater scale than is possible today. As for the destruction of war factories, that, d'Astier points out, can be accomplished far more precisely, and at less cost, by sabotage than by bombing from the air. Nor can the factor be neglected that the risk to the civilian population is less through sabotage, since that population is friendly to the Allies.

For the moment of the invasion, the value of having a guerilla army behind the lines, able to strike the German defenders in the back as the Allies attack from the front, is obvious. The arms delivered for that purpose would be paid for in terms of the lives which would be saved in the Allied forces, d'Astier argues.

Supplies to Guerillas

The RAF has, it is true, cooperated with the French underground, and has, on occasion, dropped supplies to the guerillas. But the extent of this aid has been limited, and so far d'Astier has not met sympathetic reception in high Allied circles for his demand for substantial supplies of weapons.

The reason for this standoffishness seems to be the fear that the arms will be used for "revolutionary purposes"—for civil war or political domination of other elements. Vichy has sedulously labored to spread this idea abroad, for the collaborationists with the Germans would like very much to save themselves by becoming eleventh-hour collaborationists with the victorious Allies; but they know very well that their countrymen will not let them get away with that unless Vichy is armed and the people are not.

The fear of revolutionary use of popular power, however, seems to have been proved groundless by the experience of Corsica. Although this island is traditionally that part of France where tempers run highest, where violence is most common, and where feuds, vendettas and banditry have been held in honor, the conquest of Corsica was carried out in the most orderly of fashions, and almost entirely by the underground.

The danger of internecine bloodshed lies not in giving arms to the underground, but precisely in refusing them; for it is this course which might cause the resistance groups to decide that the Allies are not on their side, but on that of the collaborationists. And if once they believe that, they will try to see to it that no collaborationists are left alive to deal with the incoming armies, and attempt, by hoodwinking them, to betray France and the Allied cause once more.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

A Guess On The Pravda Story

IT OCCURS to me, though I do not know and am merely guessing, that a not implausible theory can now be pieced together about Pravda's publication of the peace rumor which it attributed to Greek and Yugoslav sources in Cairo. When Tass, which is the official Soviet news agency, broadcast the British denial of the Ribbentrop story, it prefaced the broadcast by citing a second story, this one an authentic quotation from the Sunday Times of London, about peace proposals alleged to have been made by the Germans to the British through agents in Ankara, Lisbon, and Stockholm.

LIPPMANN

This would seem to be a very strong indication that the Russians are really worried about the possibility of some kind of deal with the Germans at their expense. The peace rumor published in the British newspaper last Sunday, and branded by it as "a carefully laid trap," said that Germany proposed to retreat behind her prewar frontiers, to renounce all claims to colonies, to scrap her fleet and her submarines, to retire Hitler and the Nazi Party, but that she wanted "to be given a limited free hand in the East." In Russian eyes terms like these would constitute a separate peace at Russia's expense.

My guess is that the Russians really believe that the Germans are preparing some such "carefully laid trap," and that they mean to make very sure that the British and we do not fall into it.

MY REASONS for thinking that this guess may at least point in the right direction is that, based on past experience, the master clue to Russian action is their almost total pre-occupation with one single thing: the menace of the German army. In the past whenever Russia has seemed enigmatic and mysterious, the correct explanation has turned out later to have been that Russia did what she did out of fear of the power of the German army. She made the Hitler-Stalin pact of 1939 to deflect Germany away from Russia and to gain time to improve her military position. She attacked Finland in 1939 to improve the defense of Leningrad and of her northern route to the ocean. She occupied the Baltic States, Bessarabia, and Eastern Poland in 1939 and 1940 to widen her frontier against Germany, and to prevent Germany from mounting the offensive that much nearer to the heart of Russia.

In their dealings with the British and the Americans the all-absorbing interest of the Russians has been that we should engage enough of the German army to relieve the pressure on the Red army. That is what they have meant by their persistent demands for "a second front." Hence they were not much interested in the soft underbelly of the Mediterranean: it was the German, not the Italian army, that interested them. Nor were they sufficiently impressed with the naval war or the air war; it was always the German army deep in Russia which they have regarded as the real enemy, and any hesitation about our coming to grips with the German army has seemed to them a sign that we were not waging total war, and has aroused their suspicions. If we were invaded by several hundred German divisions, we might take the same, perhaps oversimplified view, of the logistics of a global war.

THEREFORE, IT is plausible to look for the mainspring of this latest Russian exploit of propaganda in their long disagreement with the British over the cross-channel invasion of the Continent. But what, after the Teheran agreements, could it be that continues to worry the Russians? Not that Mr. Churchill will make a separate peace with Hitler's man, Ribbentrop. We may dismiss that absolutely and utterly. And not that the British, having agreed to the invasion, will not go through with it with their proven gallantry and good faith.

What then? That the Germans will prepare a situation which, without our intending it and in spite of our being loyally resolved against it, would in fact rupture the common Anglo-Soviet-American front in dealing with Germany. The Russians have shown themselves to have better information from inside Europe than has been available in London and Washington; and they have often shown a greater foresight about what was going to happen inside Europe than we have. If they now think the Germans are laying a trap, and that the danger is great enough to warrant a public demonstration which puts everyone, and not only officials, on guard, we had better look to what Germany might do, and overlook the disconcerting manners with which the Russians have treated their allies.

NOW IT IS common knowledge that the Germans know they will lose the war. It is also common knowledge that most Germans dread above all else the entry of the Red army. It is common knowledge that when the time comes to surrender, the Germans would like to surrender to the British and ourselves, and to be occupied by us as a protection against being occupied by the Russians.

The Russians know this quite well. While we may and must assume that Stalin does not think we would make such a faithless deal behind his back, it is not impossible that he thinks the Germans will maneuver us into a position where, without a deal, a similar result would follow. How might the Germans do that? By making a token resistance in the West while they resisted fiercely in the East in order that General Eisenhower should get to Berlin before the Russians, and impose an armistice before the Russians were fighting on German soil.

IF THIS WERE the German plan, obviously we would not and could not compel the Germans to fight us if they did not want to fight us. The relief at not having to suffer the casualties we anticipate would be very great. From the point of view of the Russians the situation would be truly alarming. For it could mean that they who had borne the brunt of the battle would be in a secondary position to settle with Germany.

It may well be then that the Russians are trying to make very sure that we realize fully, before we are enmeshed in Germany as we are in Italy, how such a German scheme might work out. Their anxieties may be accentuated by the feeling that in our political planning in regard to Italy, France, and the Balkans we have been not adequately informed and have been naive, and that our political head is not always as hard as our heart is pure.

I DO NOT KNOW whether I really believe this theory or not. It is sheer guess work. All I can say for it is that it seems to me to fit more of the facts we know than does any other theory I have heard.

'44 Combat Plane Production To Eclipse '43 by 50 Per Cent

Charles E. Wilson, vice chairman of the War Production Board, yesterday announced 50 per cent more combat-type planes will be produced in 1944, compared with 1943, but, because of an "anticipated increase in efficiency" only a relatively small increase in manpower needs is indicated.

Speaking in his capacity as chairman of the Aircraft Production Board, a WPB unit, Wilson said, "schedules for 1944 have been arranged so as to place tremendous emphasis on most needed combat types, all of which are very substantially larger than the numbers they supplant. . . .

"As smaller tactical models and certain types of trainers are removed from the program, the factory space and labor thereby made available will, to the maximum extent practicable, be used for subcontracting work for the assembly lines of the companies building large combat types.

"The anticipated increase in efficiency of the aircraft industry, based on the accomplishments of the last part of 1943, will permit this accelerated output with relatively small additional over-all manpower requirements, although substantial in some areas."

Wilson confirmed that 1944 schedules call for more than 100,000 aircraft of all types, including trainers. A total of 85,946 were made last year, compared to 47,873 in 1942, and 19,290 in 1941.

Average weight of airplanes accepted has increased from 4440 pounds in 1941 to 6110 pounds in 1942, 8630 pounds in 1943, with 10,000 pounds average expected this year, Wilson said.

Wilson said the planes produced in 1943 were equivalent in weight to 122,000 planes of 1942 average weight, with this year's projected production equivalent to 167,000 planes of 1942 weight.

Weight "is the true measure of production efforts," Wilson said.

Jap 'Crack' in Iowa Farm Quiz Brews Storm in Old Kentucky

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 19 (AP).—A solemn legislative committee listened today while an Iowa farm magazine article, sub-titled "Kentuckians or Japs?" was read and blasted by the spokesmen of a dozen angered farm and labor representatives.

The magazine, Wallace's Farmer, formerly edited by Vice President Henry A. Wallace, now listed as "editor on leave," reported that Iowa farmers had been asked if they wanted Kentucky mountain farm families brought into their State to relieve a labor shortage. At the same time, the magazine said, the Iowans were asked if they wanted Japanese-American farm families.

The fact that more Iowans preferred residents of Kentucky's hill counties to Japs was no consolation.

J. O. Matlick, Kentucky farm editor, branded as insults passages from the article printed as answers to the questions. He listed some typical answers as follows:

"I don't trust the Japs and I don't like Kentuckians. It seems we can manage if we get a little more machinery."

"Let's give our American-born Japs a chance. They are more like us."

"Japs couldn't be satisfied here. Our ways are too different. Kentuckians would blend completely with us in another generation."

Matlick and others representing vocation education interests admonished the legislative committee, a joint Senate and House appropriations group, that "that's the kind of reputation we're getting because we're not educating our farmers." The legislators were asked to consider requests for a larger vocational education budget.

Kentucky's hill country, where farmers finish their harvests early, has poured hundreds of farm workers into all sections of the country to relieve critical labor shortages. Most of the recruiting was handled through the United States Employment Service.

Matlick telegraphed Vice President Wallace and Kentucky Senators Alben Barkley and A. B. Chandler and, referring them to the article, declared, "Believe you will agree with us that implied comparison warrants public apology to Kentuckians."

More Witnesses in Delinquency Probe

Chairman D'Alesandro of the Public Health Subcommittee of the House District Committee yesterday completed preparations for investigating juvenile delinquency here and called a number of additional witnesses to the initial hearing Monday at 11 a. m.

The list of those now scheduled to testify include Maj. Edward J. Kelly, superintendent of police; Capt. Rhoda J. Milliken, head of the Women's Bureau of the Police Department; Judge Fay L. Bentley of Juvenile Court; Milo F. Christiansen, superintendent of recreation; Mrs. W. A. Roberts of the Council of Social Agencies; officials of the Police Department's boys' clubs and Boy and Girl Scout representatives.

D'Alesandro said the subcommittee wants to find out to what extent child delinquency has increased since the start of the war, the cause and remedies for alleviating present conditions. He believes improper home surroundings and lack of adequate recreational facilities may be the principal contributing factors.

Amer. Security In Year Earns $16.13 a Share

By S. Oliver Goodman

Net income of the American Security & Trust Co. amounted to $548,524 in 1943, equal to $16.13 a share on capital stock, President Corcoran Thom reported in the annual statement to stockholders. In the previous year the company netted $454,383, or $13.07 a share.

The net increase in undivided profits for 1943 was $205,524 after the payment of a regular 8 per cent dividend and an extra 2 per cent dividend.

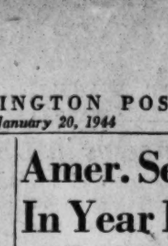
Assets and deposits at the end of 1943 reached new record levels of $97,621,111 and $87,703,406, respectively. Cash and Government securities amounted to $77,538,429, or 89.5 per cent of deposits, an unusually strong liquid position.

President Thom also pointed out that the bank sold to the public more than 28 million in war bonds and increased its own purchases by more than 12 million during the year.

Business Briefs Of D. C. Interest

J. P. Nolan Doubly Honored

James Parker Nolan, Washington investment dealer, received a double honor yesterday. He was elected president of the Washington Stock Exchange and, in addition, received word that he had been named to the executive committee of the National Association of Securities Dealers.



MR. NOLAN

Mr. Nolan, a partner in the Washington house of Folger, Nolan & Co., succeeds Edson B. Olds as head of the local exchange. Other officers of the market, elected yesterday, are:

Harold C. Patterson of Auchincloss, Parker & Redpath, vice president; T. Baker Robinson of Robinson, Rohrbaugh & Lukens, secretary, and Myles H. Quail of Alexander Brown & Sons, treasurer.

Elected to the governing committee were Mr. Olds, Harold C. Patterson, James M. Johnston and Thomas P. Montgomery. Mr. Olds was elected chairman. Members already serving on the committee are Myles H. Quail and T. Baker Robinson, while Mr. Nolan becomes a member as head of the exchange.

Deposits Gain 2½ Million

The Prince Georges Bank & Trust Co. yesterday reported deposits of $11,230,000, a gain of more than $2,500,000 during the past year. Resources of $12,200,000 were $3,600,000 more than at the end of 1942.

The nearby Maryland bank now holds more than $3,600,000 in Government securities and in addition sold more than $1,300,000 to the public in 1943.

At the recent stockholders meeting all directors were reelected and at the directors session President T. Howard Duckett and all other officers were likewise reelected.

Auditors to Hear Dr. Kayser

The monthly meeting tonight of the auditors' section of the District of Columbia Bankers Association will be addressed by Dr. Elmer Louis Kayser, dean of university students, George Washington University. The meeting will follow a dinner at the Sheraton Hotel. James C. Elgin, W. B. Hibbs & Co., chairman of the section, will preside.

Columbia Federal Reports

The Columbia Federal Savings & Loan Association netted $274,191 in 1943, according to the annual statement to shareholders by Clarence E. Kefauver, executive vice president and secretary. Savings and investments in the association showed an increase of $1,107,900 for the year and assets increased $1,154,345.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Some Important Films Also Are Coming Along

Likely First-Runs on Their Way; News and Gossip of the Theater

PREOCCUPATION with the Fourth War Loan, the impending President's Birthday Celebrations and other extra-curricular activities has largely obscured contemplation of the fact that a considerable grist of excellent screen entertainment is in the immediate offing.

SUSAN HAYWARD

The Earle Theater, for example, is laying stress on the diversity of its imminent bookings, which, it is boasting, will dedicate themselves respectively to action, comedy, music, drama and glamour. That's a fair gamut, as the saying goes, for any house to run.

The first of these qualities will be supplied by Republic's "The Fighting Seabees," scheduled to follow the current "What a Woman!" on Thirteenth street. John Wayne, Susan Hayward and Dennis O'Keefe are the stars of this fast-moving item, addressed to the Navy's comparatively new fighting construction battalion, in whose honor Harry Anger not so long ago staged a multiple-scene pageant, which he might well have hung onto until now.

The comedy will be forthcoming from "No Time for Love," in which Claudette Colbert and Fred MacMurray are reputed to deliver a laugh a minute for the further glory of dear, old Paramount.

Believe it or not, after a couple of years of backing and filling, the musical number the Earle is bragging about is the Warner Brothers Technicolor production of "The Desert Song," costarring Dennis Morgan and Irene Manning. Could be, since the picture is now playing on Broadway, much to everybody's astonishment, including the Warners', no doubt.

The Burbank studios also are coming through with "In Our Time," modestly ticketed as in the same category of edge-of-the-chair dramatic interest as "Dark Victory," "Now, Voyager" and "Watch on the Rhine." Ida Lupino, Paul Henreid and Nancy Coleman are the stars.

If it is the glamour you have been waiting for, that will be found in Columbia's "Cover Girl," with Rita Hayworth its Technicolored star. Based on the prevalent "pin-up" craze, "Cover Girl" is described as a "bright and fanciful musical, filled with beautiful girls, songs and comedy."

And that, ladies and gentlemen, is the top of the Warner news from here—with apologies to the loudspeakers!

As for the Loew houses, "Madame Curie," distinguished by the performance of Greer Garson and Walter Pidgeon and a brilliant cast in support, is commanding the enthusiastic attention it deserves at the Palace, and this morning "Corvette K-225," with Randolph Scott and Ella Raines, will be throwing its spray across the screen at the Capitol. In the wake of these, without specification as to which house or when, will be coming along such as Alfred Hitchcock's "Lifeboat," in which Tallulah Bankhead scores the same sort of triumph on the screen as she did in "The Skin of Our Teeth," on the stage—William Bendix, Henry Hull and John Hodiak are in there, too—Spencer Tracy and Irene Dunne in "A Guy Named Joe"; "The Lodger," a "Jack-the-Ripper" thriller, with Merle Oberon, George Sanders and Laird Cregar, and "Song of Russia," costarring Robert Taylor and Susan Peters.

On the heels of "Flesh and Fantasy," at RKO-Keith's, the feature will be "His Butler's Sister," the first straight farce in which Deanna Durbin ever has appeared. Her very snazzy support includes such as Franchot Tone, Pat O'Brien, Akim Tamiroff, Evelyn Ankers, Alan Mowbray, Frank Jenks and Walter Catlett, as lusty a lot of funsters as you'd be likely to find impaled on a single title.

Have Raised the Ante

"One Dollar for Every Seat," a paraphrase of the picture industry's slogan and goal for the Fourth War Loan, has been adopted as the watchword of the March of Dimes campaign, the committee in charge has announced. Attainment of this goal will net $56,000 for the fight against infantile paralysis.

Last year, $31,000 was the total raised by the March of Dimes in Washington. This was an average of 60 cents for every theater seat in the District of Columbia.

President Roosevelt expressed the conviction of all concerned when he wrote in a letter to the Motion Picture Theaters Committee of the 1944 March of Dimes drive, in part as follows: "With the magnificent performance of your group last year very vividly in my mind, I am confident that you and your co-workers will live up to the campaign slogan which you have chosen for the coming motion picture theater drive, 'More in '44.'"

Once the boys buckle down to it, the thing is as good as done.

On next Wednesday and Thursday, January 26 and 27, the Apex Theater, out Massachusetts avenue extended way, will be giving uptown Washington what will probably turn out to be its last crack at a double-feature bill of unusual distinction. This will consist of "The Baker's Wife," one of the screen's great exhibits, starring Raimu, and "Hold Back the Dawn," with Charles Boyer, Olivia de Havilland and Paulette Goddard at the top of its cast. Singly, each is a bargain; coupled up for a single admission, they are a plain "steal."

Broadway Potpourri

New York, Jan. 19.—Lieut. Sidney Kingsley has reported for check-up to the Fort Totten Hospital. This is his fourteenth week of whooping-cough. His wife, Madge Evans, is suffering a recurrence of pleurisy . . . Now that the Army and Air Force work have been officially dramatized in Broadway plays, Sergt. Gottfried Reinhardt, the director-son of the late Max Reinhardt, has completed a play about the Army Service Supply.

DICK COE

"I edit your columns, for the Stars and Stripes," writes Corpl. Richard L. Coe, from the Middle East. "It's something like old times. Before the war I was in the drama department of The Washington Post, working under Nelson Bell, where I edited your column every damn day" . . . Connie Immermann, the night-club man who made "Connie's Inn" and the Cotton Club famous, has been touring the induction centers, trying to join the Army. Connie, who was gassed in the last war, asks only one condition—that he go overseas. "Being stationed in America," he explains, "would be like sitting in the lobby while a show's going on in a theater."

The theater, movie and radio entertainers will send a committee to Washington with the signed petitions in behalf of the Soldier Vote bill . . . Theodora Roosevelt, granddaughter of Theodore Roosevelt, is one of the ballerinas in Vincent Youman's Revue which is opening in Baltimore . . . Grace Castagnetto, a friend of Hendrick Willem Van Loon, got around to reading the New Yorker profile on Van Loon. She queried the noted author about it, and he sent a wire, to her Woodridge, N. J., home: "Who reads the New Yorker anyway?" The wire was delivered, together with a note inclosed by the messenger, "I do."

Tallulah Bankhead, now being acclaimed for her brilliant performance in Alfred Hitchcock's "Lifeboat," was discussing the billing John Steinbeck receives as author of the story. "Steinbeck gets big billing because his name is such a draw," Tallulah was told. "Is that so?" replied Tallulah. "Do you suppose they're standing in line at the Astor to see Steinbeck?" . . . The New York theater shortage has become so acute that the Mutual Network is renting a CBS Radio Theater for the new "Pick and Pat" program. . . . Colonel Moe, "The Kimp" Snyder, who lost his fortune betting on the horses, has his own postwar program. "Let's shoot all the race horses and send the meat to Europe," is the colonel's solution. "It'll feed them, and save us from dying broke."

Tom Benton, the artist, is bidding goodby to Kansas, where he's painted for many years. He's moving as soon as he can find a suitable home in Bucks County, Pa. . . . During the rehearsals of "Suds In Your Eye," Kay Brown, the producer, phoned her husband, Jim Barrett, and reported that there was some trouble with Jack Kirkland's direction. Barrett, a lawyer who had never bet on a horse before, noticed that "Trouble Comin' Up," ridden by a jockey named Kirkland, was running that day. He bet $2 on it. The horse paid $48 to $1. . . . Six rare Knights of Malta buttons were brought back from Malta by Lieut. F. D. R., jr. They'll become family cuff links.

HEDDA HOPPER

A Busy Convalescence

Hollywood, Calif., Jan. 19:—Ruth Nelson, who's playing the first Mrs. Wilson, has been set for Roddy McDowall's mother in "Keys of the Kingdom." Roddy plays Father Chisholm as a boy. Ruth belonged to New York group theater until she became ill a couple of years ago. She was sent to Palm Springs to recover. After a year she did, but to make doubly sure, worked as a ranch hand around Santa Barbara for another year. Then she tested with Roman Bohnen because he wanted a part in "North Star." They took her instead of him. Then she was signed to a long term contract at Twentieth Century . . . Keenan Wynn, Army bound almost any minute, stops long enough to play a naval officer in "Since You Went Away." Which reminds me, Jennifer Jones' parents are here for a two weeks' visit with "Bernadette" [Jennifer]. . . . R. K. O.'s playing it safe. It has signed Dennis Day to a two-picture-a-year deal. I suppose if Frank Sinatra falls by the wayside, Dennis will be the mainstay.

KEENAN WYNN

Honor Due

With all the talk about launching the Carole Lombard last Saturday, I asked about "Fieldsie." 'Fieldsie' [Mrs. Walter Lang] was Carole's best friend. The ship couldn't be launched without her, so she was matron of honor. Clark Gable also was present. Funny thing, they first selected ship No. 13, which was finished [the 13th]. Then the idea came that theatrical folks are pretty superstitious, so they changed to No. 8, finished Saturday. That was the Carole Lombard.

Short Snorts

Harry James will dedicate Mozelle Britton's song, "Only You Have Kissed My Heart," to Betty Grable. How's that again? . . . Well, Well! I suspected there was more to that Joan Blondell and Dick Powell divorce than meets the eye. It seems the little lady has eyes for some one else. . . . Lum and Abner had to turn down the juiciest offer of their lives. It came from none other than Henry Ford. They already have a radio show . . . Cole Porter arrives within the month. He has three jobs waiting for him. Linda Porter arrives some time in March . . . Bets are being made as to whether Bob Cummings will win his lawsuit against Universal before he marries Mary Constant . . . Rex St. Cyr doesn't think it can be true that Mrs. James Hill married Baron Wrangel three weeks ago in New York, because she hasn't told him. Jimmy McHugh had a letter from an American bomber pilot in Australia saying his rear gunner on the way back from every mission plays "We've Got the Lord on Our Side" on his harmonica—and they haven't had a scratch in 63 trips.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

IF YOU ARE thinking twice about how much money you should invest in Government bonds, consider the experience of Gov. Ernest Gruening of Alaska.

Some time ago, Governor Gruening, visited St. Lawrence Island, a long, narrow strip of land in the Bering Sea so near Siberia that you can look across on a clear day and see the coast of Asia. It is the most northwesterly area of the United States populated by humans—a series of Eskimo villages.

Gruening, the first Governor of Alaska ever to visit the island, wanted to help prepare them to resist possible invasion from Japan. A group of Government officials had been there before, and asked the Eskimos to help throw up earthen fortifications. They said they would be glad to, except that it was the hunting season and, if they did not get their season's catch, they would be caught short for food later in the season.

"But if you will help us now," the Eskimos were told, "we will send you a shipload of white man's food later."

So they had helped, to a man and including some women, in building up the island's fortifications. However, the shipload of food never came.

Governor Gruening, arriving later, distributed rifles not only for resisting the Japs but also for hunting, and gave the natives a series of talks every evening about civilian defense and what the war was all about. Finally, he approached the subject of war bonds.

"Those big planes you see in the sky," he explained, "cost money. Uncle Sam has to pay for them. Those rifles we have given you also cost money. Uncle Sam pays for them with war bonds. Every American citizen buys war bonds—usually each citizen gives about one-tenth of his salary."

Then he suggested that the tribe's community fund had some money on hand (a total of $15,000) and the tribe might wish to buy war bonds with part of it. The Eskimos held a whispered conference. Finally, a grizzled chief reported to Governor Gruening:

"We buy $15,000."

"That's very generous of you," replied the Governor, "but that is your entire fund. Perhaps you had better reconsider and save some of that money for an emergency in case of sickness or lack of food."

Again there was a whispered consultation. Again the chief came back and reported:

"I talk to my people. They say, 'Uncle Sam been very good to us. We give $15,000—and we shoot Jap too'."

Little Business Champion

INSIDE FACT about the appointment of Maury Maverick as head of the vitally important Smaller War Plants Corporation of WPB was that White House advisers favored someone else, and it was only the conservative businessmen and Republicans inside the War Production Board who put Maverick across.

This will be news to a lot of people in Texas and Congress who for years viewed Maverick as a wild, lone steer. In Congress, he was a tough, hard-hitting New Dealer, introduced the President's Supreme Court bill and fought for all FDR's reforms. As Mayor of San Antonio, he cleaned up the slums and rode roughshod over so many politicians that, at the next election, they kicked him out.

Then he came to Washington to head the Government Division of the War Production Board. Many people viewed Maury as a lame-duck Congressman occupying a cushy spot on the public payroll. But they didn't know Maverick. He has done one of the outstanding jobs inside the WPB, has won the confidence and respect of big shot businessmen who politically differ with him completely.

When it came to appointing a new head of the Smaller War Plants Corporation, White House advisers wanted Morris Cooke, former Rural Electrification administrator, an excellent man. The Senate Small Business Business Committee, stanch champions of little business, also wanted Cooke and put up a long fight against Maverick.

Big Business Stands Pat

HOWEVER, Donald Nelson and WPB moguls championed Maverick. The showdown came at a secret meeting of the Senate Small Business Committee.

"Maury Maverick is a friend of little business and I have no doubts that he would do a good job," argued Senator Murray of Montana. "But I am convinced that Cooke would do a better job, because of his greater all-around experience."

"If I wanted to play partisan politics, I'd be for the appointment of Maverick," put in GOP Senator Kenneth S. Wherry of Nebraska. "From a political standpoint, it would be one of the worst things that could happen to the Democratic Party in an election year to put the fate of little business in the hands of a parlor pink like Maverick."

"You're mistaken, Senator," shot back Nelson. "Maury has changed a lot since he served in Congress. He used to be a politician, but he's settled down since he became head of the WPB's Government Division. Judging by his record there and my own association with him, I'm convinced we couldn't get a better man to run the Smaller War Plants Corporation."

Only one member of the committee sided with Nelson—Senator Tom Stewart of Tennessee. Stewart almost brought the house down by declaring gruffly: "What if Maverick is a politician? We've already had two businessmen in this job and they fell flat. I'm in favor of trying a politician."

In the end, Nelson took the matter to President Roosevelt personally, and FDR okayed Maverick's appointment.

Bagby Revives Boudreau Tiff, Seeks Trade

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

Like the United States Army, big league baseball is lowering its standards and compromising with quality after feeling the pinch of manpower, and it is the New York Yankees who are offering up the latest bit of evidence on that score. The Yankees are calling up Ed Levy from Newark to play the outfield next season.

POVICH

Levy has been in the Yankee farm system for seven years now and was supposedly a first baseman. They didn't send him back to Newark in the spring of 1942 because he couldn't play first base. He couldn't hit big league pitching. But now he comes back as an outfielder and Ed Barrow mentions him as a regular with the Yankees. In these times the Yankees can't be too particular.

Manager Joe McCarthy never presumed that Levy would be back with the Yankees. He cheerfully sent the 6-foot-5-inch fellow back to Newark two years ago, unimpressed with his talents. Levy started the season in 1942 as the Yanks' first baseman and when he made only one hit in the first six games, McCarthy heaved him back to Newark and turned the first-base job over to Buddy Hassett.

But the Yankees have altered their viewpoints, like every other team in the league. All of a sudden, Levy has taken shape as a valuable chattel. His first asset is a medical discharge from the Army, which means he is safe from the draft. And there was nothing the matter with the .315 average he compiled in 144 games at Newark last season. Perhaps he has learned to hit.

The completeness with which the teams have been compelled to relax big league standards is strikingly evident by mention of the Yankee outfield that Barrow pictures for 1944. "Levy will probably play alongside Johnny Lindell and Bud Metheny," he says. Lindell is a reformed pitcher who hit .246 last year. Metheny was a .261 hitter. It's a far shout from the likes of Babe Ruth, Joe Di Maggio, Charley Keller, Bob Meusel, Earl Combs and Tommy Henrich who used to patrol Yankee outfields.

But the task of the big league clubs this year is to put nine men on the field without being too particular as to their skill. An ordinary kind of ball team could win the 1944 pennant.

The Washington club made the first overtures for Levy and missed out on him, but without much expression of regret. They first saw him at their Orlando, Fla., training camp when he ambled onto the diamond in the uniform of nearby Rollins College. Bucky Harris liked his height and the target he presented at first base, but his batting stroke was not impressive.

The Nats liked him well, enough, though, to invite him to come back the next day for a tryout, but he didn't show up. A Yankee scout in the vicinity swooped down on Levy and bound him to a Yankee contract without a trial. Reportedly he got $1,000 for signing.

Manager Joe McCarthy thought he might do in the spring of 1942 and he did, indeed, open the season as the Yankees first baseman. He went hitless in the first four games, but with the Yankees winning all four, McCarthy was tolerant. However, when the Yankees lost the next two, with Levy making only one hit, Levy was dispatched to Newark. The Yankees are like that. They don't trifle with fellows who don't produce quickly.

Levy's first experience with the Yankees recalls that a rookie always has it tougher to break in with the New York club than with any other in the league. Imagine how long Sid Hudson would have lasted with the Yankees. With the Nats, he was knocked out of the box in his first seven starts. He would never have made seven losing starts with the Yankees. At the end of two or three losing games, he'd have been back in the minors. But the Nats, unlike the Yankees, were short-handed, and kept Hudson around and were richly rewarded when he started to win.

Incidentally, Levy's name, if he sticks with the Yankees, will be no drawback at the gate, in New York. The New York clubs, in deference to the city's two million Jews, value players with names like Levy.

However, Levy isn't Levy's name. He's not Jewish, but Irish. His mother married again when he was a mere boy and he took the name of his stepfather. In later years, he met his father and readopted his own name. When he signed his contract "Ed Wittmer" in 1942, President Barrow of the Yankees was surprised. "You may be Wittmer to the rest of the world," said Barrow, but if you are going to play with the Yankees you'll be Ed Levy, understand?" Levy said he understood.

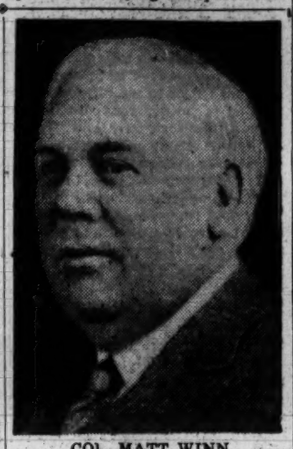
For Better Sport:

Colonel Winn Asks for Unity Among Racing Associations

By Sid Feder

New York, Jan. 19 (AP).—Col. Watt Winn, a young fellow of 83 just starting out on a new career, stepped up in meeting today and suggested that racing pull itself together, because it's a "big boy" now.

"Mr. Kentucky Derby" has a mere half century or so in racing behind him, so he was speaking from experience in saying the sport needs "unity and unison" among racing associations to keep up the tremendous proportions to which it has grown.



COL. MATT WINN

And trying to bring about some of that unity is one of the big reasons he has just taken over the job of running Empire City here in New York and Laurel in Maryland, on top of his old spots at Churchill Downs and Chicago's Lincoln Fields.

Racing Still Growing

"Racing has been my whole life," explained the white-haired Kentuckian who has seen every Derby. "It's a great sport—and a big business, too. I've seen it grow to where it is now—$710,000,000 bet last year, $32,500,000 to the States in revenue, more millinos to the Federal Government in taxes, and big enough to contribute $5,000,000 to war relief. And it's still growing.

"And I can see now that it has to be unified if it wants to keep that position. The tracks from coast to coast have to get together not only to insure good racing but also to guarantee the best interests of the fans. This is the responsibility of the racing associations themselves. They have to see that racing is conducted as it should be. And they, themselves, have to settle the turf's problems, to keep racing on a high level, and to make sure that it stays that way. To do this, the racing associations can't have any arguments among themselves, as has been the case at times in the past."

And the TRA Was Born

This idea is no brand-new baby for the colonel. About a year and a half ago, he got the operators of several tracks together at a meeting in his quarters in Chicago, and from that huddle the Thoroughbred Racing Association was organized. This is an outfit which now has as members virtually every major track in the country.

"The TRA is still new," Colonel Matt pointed out, "but it's growing and improving. It has to get to the point where it will take definite stands on racing policies and have all its members abide by them. That's the kind of closely knit organization the sport needs, and if I can help bring it about, I don't care how much work it takes."

It is obvious the colonel wasn't kidding about that. The way things now stand, he's going to have to travel under a full head of steam from the opening of the spring meeting at Churchill Downs right through the fall sessions at Empire and Laurel, without a letup. "But that's okay," he smiled. "I'm just a young fellow."

Hialeah Test To Piccadilly, D. C. Horse

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 19 (AP).—With Ted Atkinson riding his seventeenth winner of the 11-day-old meeting, Piccadilly, owned by Mrs. Donald Woodward of Washington, D. C., outran a half dozen other veterans in the 6½-furlong Orange Blossom handicap, the Grade C featured offering witnessed by a good-sized throng here today.

Making it two for two at the meeting, Piccadilly lasted to register by a neck over The Finest, which ran coupled with Full Cry as the Brolite Farm entry. Four lengths off the front pair, Herbert M. Woolf's Legislator was third. Piccadilly, paying $9.20 for $2, completed his trip over a slow track in 1:19 4-5. Legislator was a slight choice over K. Dorko, which ran fourth.

Carries 115 Pounds

Piccadilly carried 115 pounds, or one less than the top-weighted K. Dorko. The latter sampled Piccadilly's pace in the early stages, finding it too brisk. Legislator also tried to keep up with the Charing Cross gelding and he, too, was found wanting. The Finest, which had been rated within range of the first flight, made his bid through the front lane. He gained with every stride, cutting down Piccadilly's daylight lead in the final furlong, but the Woodward sprinter held on long enough to reward the Atkinson followers.

The turnstiles clicked 8252 times this sunny afternoon.

Doubt Not Winner

Doubt Not, the 8-year-old gray gelding which rediscovered his racing legs down here this winter, accounted for his third straight victory in the sixth race, a Grade D affair at a mile and a sixteenth on the grass which was split and run as the sixth and seventh races.

The veteran, trained by Alfred Robertson, carried 122 pounds and outran his rivals from the start, reporting four lengths in the van at $5.90 for $2. Doubt Not began his winning streak running for $1250, repeated in $2500 claiming company and continued on the upgrade today.

Boot and Spur, a slight choice over the victor, chased the Gray Ghost home, beating Lucia's Sun by a length for the place.

Answer Is "No:"

Tom O'Donnell's $5000 Offer Declined by Perry's Manager

Harry Garsh, manager of Lightweight Boxer Aaron Perry, yesterday gave an amazing answer to the amazing $5000 offer of Tom O'Donnell, well known Washington restaurant owner, for a half interest in his fighter.

Garsh's answer was "No."

The pilot of the hard-hitting but virtually untried colored boy believes Perry's good prospects do not warrant allowing anyone to buy in. O'Donnell, who made the offer several times before Garsh found he was in earnest, had given Perry's manager until noon tomorrow, 10 hours before the boy's fight with Victor Creelman here, to make up his mind.

In declining, Garsh said last night: "I appreciate the generous offer of Mr. O'Donnell and his interest in Perry, but I have decided to decline it. I believe that Perry will net $5000 from his bouts within the next three months.

"Perry's progress since he came out of the amateur ranks is more rapid than that of any young fighter I have ever seen, and I think he is ready now for top-flight opposition. I am predicting that he will knock out Creelman on Friday night."

MANAGER GARSH

Pitcher Says Their Dislike Is Mutual

Cleveland, Jan. 19 (AP).—When it comes to baseball, Jim Bagby and Lou Boudreau are mutually exclusive—say Bagby.

The tall right-handed pitcher who won 17 games for the Cleveland Indians in 1943, today revived a long-standing tiff with Boudreau, manager of the tempestuous tribe.

BAGBY

"I just don't believe he and I ever can get along on the same ball club," said the hurler in a letter to Sportswriter Ed McCauley of the Cleveland News.

BOUDREAU

Ir off season employment as a tool designer for Bell Aircraft at Marietta, Ga., Bagby reiterated his hope for a trade to another club.

"Boudreau does not like me and I don't care a hell of a lot for him," Bagby wrote. "The best thing Cleveland can do is trade me. Where? Anywhere."

Bagb's feud with Boudreau dat. s from last September, when he aired his views on an episode which occurred in Washington, and asked his immediate trade.

The moundsman said Boudreau fined him $100 for not taking a warm-up run before a night game in Washington, "where, as a matter of fact, I ha done by running before Boudreau reached the park."

"Any man who can take $100 from another man, for a reason that he himself cannot honestly explain—why, there's no way of being friends," Bagby wrote. "He nev took that fine off, and from then on I said what I thought."

Boudreau at the time said Bagby was out of condition and remarked, "Jim and I don't see eye-to-eye on some things."

The young manager put Bagby on the trading block this winter but received no attractive offers. He expressed a willingness to keep the pitcher, asserting "I would rather have a disgruntled winner than a happy loser."

Bagby, 27-year-old native Clevelander, went to the Boston Red Sox from the minor leagues in 1941, and was traded to the Indians in December, 1042.

Howard Five Winner Over Morgan, 39-35

Howard University pulled out of a tight one last night, coming up from a one-point lead in the last minutes of play to defeat Morgan College, 39 to 35, to take its sixth cage victory of the season.

Morgan led by three points during the second quarter, but Howard had managed to turn the tables and led, 22 to 19, at halftime. Frank Daniels was high scorer for the home team, with 17 points, and Bo Brown led for Morgan with 14. Bill Burt and Bob Ransome were outstanding in floor play for the victors.

Howard will journey to Morgan on February 9 for the other half of the home and home series.

In two round robin games played as preliminaries, Section I, led by E. Davis' 14 points, defeated Section K, 44 to 32. Section A downed Section C, 29 to 26, with Dorsey's 9 points and Dow's 13 pacing the rivals. The teams are from Engineer Company A, Service Battalion.

Creelman Slight Choice Over Perry

Indications last night were that Victor Creelman will answer the bell a slight favorite when he steps out against popular Aaron Perry in their scheduled nine-round boxing bout at Uline Arena tomorrow night.

Creelman, fighting mad over his split-decision loss to Billy Banks which ended his winning streak at 31 successive bouts, has put in a week's hard training in Stillman's gymnasium, New York, and will complete training today at the Merrick Boys Club gymnasium.

Perry terminates preparation at the Twelfth Street YMCA today, and insists that he's ready and eager for battle.

Harry Garsh, veteran manager of Perry, said last night: "I've been on the lookout for a lightweight like Perry since Bruce Flowers faded out of the picture years ago. And I believe I have the right boy now."

Preliminaries promising plenty of action are to back up the nine-round feature.

In one six-rounder Bee Bee Washington, popular middleweight, slugs it out with Lew Phillips, rugged Baltimore boy. Maxie Starr, a big favorite here and a 140-pounder, returns against Charley "Dixie" Davis, a fine prospect around New York, in another six.

A four-round bout involving light heavyweights, pits Eddie Sparks against Jackie Smith, while another four, to be announced, opens the show at 8:45 o'clock.

Colts Sneak Up to Defeat Episcopal

Coolidge High continued along the victory trail yesterday, defeating Episcopal High at Alexandria, 29-16, after the Episcopalians had led earlier.

Episcopal, which scored decisive victories over Bullis Prep and Washington-Lee, started against the Colts in the same manner, leading 3-1 at the end of the first quarter. Good defensive work on both sides kept the score well down during the first half, from which Coolidge emerged with a one-point, 6-5, lead.

Center Bill Laing took top scoring honors away from Jim Lafferty for Coolidge yesterday, with 10 points to Lafferty's five, and sinking a good many of them in the last half. Goodman, Burnett and Peters, scored four points each for Episcopal.

The Coolidge Jayvees defeated Eastern junior varsity yesterday, 35-15, to take their sixth straight, Mike Levin, Frank Lambert and Charles Kiesgen scored six points apiece.

Gonzaga Beaten In Baltimore, 36 to 31

Baltimore, Md., Jan. 18.—Gonzaga High of Washington put up a strong battle here this afternoon, but went down swinging before the Mount St. Joseph's five, 36 to 31. The visitors were unable to get to the front. The locals led, 18 to 13, at half time. Coakley and Cranston did the bulk of the scoring for Gonzaga, while Gordon and Eikenberg led the Mount St. Joseph's attack.

Williams, Buffalo On Turner's Card

Matchmaker Gabe Menendez yesterday announced he had signed Holman Williams, Joe Louis' protege, to meet Gene Buffalo, former Philadelphia middleweight contender, for a 10-round headliner next Monday night at Turner's Arena.

Williams recently was ranked by the National Boxing Association as the second best middleweight in the world among the boxers actively campaigning. Only Jake LaMotta, the Bronx battler was rated ahead of the classy Chicago colored scrapper.

Williams, undefeated last season, recently won 10 out of 10 rounds from Tee Hubert, the District titleholder, at Turner's Arena, hitting the lanky former Georgian with everything but his water bucket. Buffalo, who is training daily at the Apollo gym, more than welcomed the chance to meet Williams.

Shoemaker Heads Umps

I. L. Shoemaker has been elected president of the District Baseball Umpires Association, with George B. Watt named vice president and Joseph L. Morrissey secretary-treasurer. Morrissey announced that due to war conditions, the annual banquet is being dispensed with for the duration.

Fort Myer Winner

The Fort Myer five defeated the War Manpower Commission, 31-to-24, at the 12th st. Y last night. Haley's 16 points and Shaw 14 led their respective teams.

Jacobsen Wins, 117-62; Kreisberg Shoots 33 Goals

All records for scoring in the Heurich League were shattered last night when the Jacobsen's Florists defeated the District Silents, 117 to 62. The winners' total was a new mark, as were the 33 (honest) field goals made by Barry Kreisberg and his total of 67 points. Neither team concentrated on guarding, which resulted in the large count.

Roosevelt Beats Washington-Lee

The Roosevelt Rough Riders added a new scoring star to stellar Bunny Citrenbaum, as Pete Loomis led the scoring to defeat Washington-Lee High, 43-28, at Ballston yesterday. Loomis scored 18 points, but Citrenbaum also distinguished himself with 15.

San Francisco Open Nets Initial Profit

San Francisco, Jan. 19 (AP).—For the first time in the 13-year history of the San Francisco Open Golf tournament, the annual event netted a profit this year.

J. Roger Deas, secretary of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, which sponsors the tournament, said all expenses this year were cleared on the second day of play and that the last two days' receipts were clear profit.

Navy Trounces Swarthmore

Annapolis, Jan. 19 (AP).—The Swarthmore College cagers proved no match for Navy's basketball squad today as the Middie's ran roughshod over the visitors, 73-39.

The Tar attack, apparently fully regained after the defeat last Saturday at the hands of North Carolina Preflight, built up an early lead to end the first half with a substantial 38-16 margin which Swarthmore was never able to overcome.

Navy's third-string center, John Carroll, took individual scoring honors as he accounted for 14 points in a second-half scoring spree. Of nine personal foul shots, the Middies missed only two.

On the basis of this score, Navy compares favorably against a mutual opponent with their arch rival, Army, since the West Point quintet recently had beaten Swarthmore, 80-29.

Army Five Beats St. John's 49-36

West Point, N. Y., Jan. 19.—A great army basketball team trailing 20 to 18 at halftime, rolled over once-beaten St. Johns University, 49 to 36, with a second-period explosion sparked by Dale Hall. Hall tosed in 21 points, 16 of them after the intermission, and set in motion the attack that ripped the Redmen's defense to pieces.

The lead changed hands six times in the opening session, but Hall escorted the Cadets to the front a minute after the second half opened and after that the Redmen were in the game only once.

Marshall High's Cage Streak Hits 90 Mark

Chicago, Jan. 19 (AP).—There might be a longer winning streak than the 90-straight hung up by the Marshall High junior baskebtall team, but Chicago Prep fans haven't heard about it. The West Side five, which hasn't lost a game in almost five years, won their ninetieth consecutive last night, and has a chance to attain 100 straight wins before the season closes.

Dunbar High Wins

Dunbar High was forced to go into overtime yesterday to defeat the Dunbar alumni team, 32-28. The alumni was leading, 26-25, in the last minute of play, when Bob Cannady scored a foul shot to tie it up. Eldridge, of the alumni, made it 28-26, but Charlie Cabiness tied it up again. Then Ray Taylor and John Stratford of Dunbar scored three and one points, respectively, for the final score.

YMCA League

Woodward defeated Falls Church, 21 to 19, in the closest game at the YMCA last night. Hodgkin led the winers attack. The Flashes, paced by Poppel's 8 points, beat the Pages, 30 to 20, while Westminster, with Sanford making 26 points, routed B. S. Troop 72 by a 62 to 30.

Brown's Shot Decides

Brown's shot sealed a 27-to-26 victory for the Hi-Y team last night in their clash with the Lincoln Cubs at the Randle Recreation Center.

LaMotta Faces Harris

New York, Jan. 19 (AP).—Nick Londos, Detroit matchmaker, today announced the signing of Jake LaMotta, New York, and Ozzie Harris, Pittsburgh, for a 10-round fight in Detroit's Olympia, January 28. Mike Delia, Los Angeles, and Billy Miller, Pittsburgh, will meet in the 10-round semifinal.

Penn State Drops Fencing

State College, Pa., Jan. 19.—Fencing is Penn State's first casualty list on the wartime sports front. Lack of war-precious equipment prompted cancellation of the Lion schedule this winter.

Bears to Meet Mets on Sunday

Toughest opposition of the season for the Lichtman Bears is promised for Sunday at 4:30 p. m. at Turner's Arena when they clash with the Mets, unbeaten Negro pros from the Oriole City.

The Bears, by the narrowest of margins in each case, have defeated the Mets four times in the past two seasons, but the Baltimoreans are regarded this year as more formidable than ever.

In their line-up will appear the former Armstrong star, "Sugar" Cain, who also was the sensation of the Morgan College line-up. With them also will be "Deuce" Gibson and the veteran "Rap" Wheatley.

Artie Brown Wins

Artie Brown scored a technical knockout over Smuggy Hury in a 135-pound battle that featured boxing last night at the Police Boys Club No. 2. Other winners were Kid Henry, who downed Jessie Hagans, and John Burton, who defeated Henry Porter.

La Chappelle And Chicanery Defeat Evans

They come up with some freakish endings in the wrestling matches at Turner's Arena, but last night's feature bout between Maurice La Chappelle and Don Evans hit a new high in screwball finishes—Evans was disqualified because La Chappelle tackled Referee Tiny Bouque.

The referee evidently thought it was Evans who pulled it, and despite the loser's pleas and the customers' howls, awarded the decision to the Frenchman.

In the two-man team match, Dick Bishop and Mike DeMetra defeated Dr. John Bonika and Jack Wentworth in two-out-of-three falls. Johnny Long fought Michele Leone 30 minutes to a draw and Tom Mahoney won over Ed White in 16 minutes with a leg lock and body press.

Glenna Collett Vare Wages Battle of Points

By Beatrice Biberman

Philadelphia, Jan. 19 (AP).—She's victory gardener and Ration Board Clerk Glenna Collett Vare for the duration.

When the six-time winner of the National Women's Golf Championship entered the North-South competition in Pinehurst, N. C., last April it was the first time she had teed off in six months.

"And I didn't do very well," says the gracious Philadelphia Main Line matron. That makes her a little uncertain about the future of her golf career. There's little chance to play now, though a few times last summer she made the trip to her rather inaccessible country club—by foot and by horse and buggy.

Another favorite sport—trapshooting—is virtually out until gas is in again. Her husband asked her recently to clean the guns. Mrs. Vare commented: "I guess for next year."

She turned her sportswoman's skill to gardening last June. Successfully?

"Sure," she says, explaining that the vegetables of her labor kept the Edwin H. Vare, jr., family fairly well fed all summer.

"We've got more eggs than we can use, too. We distribute them around the neighborhood."

But the new tenants of the Vare garage are exclusively Mr. Vare's chickens. His wife complains they're too friendly.

Once or twice weekly Mrs. Vare listens to the woes of ration book applicants at the Bryn Mawr board. Surprisingly, few people recognize the former Connecticut girl who became first lady of American golf when she was 19.

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Mrs. Vare snapped yesterday with first golf trophy.

Three years later—on her birthday, June 20, 1925—she captured the French title. And among her too-many-to-count trophies is a silver cup that stands about 1½ inches high—a symbol that she was too much competition for the Canadian Women Golfers.

She never was much of a spectator sportswoman, Mrs. Vare says, "but horse races, that's different."

2 D. C. Marines Move On; Japs Level Haven

A story of two Washington Marine Corps officers who took their 21 men on a midnight advance which saved their lives was told yesterday by Marine Corps Combat Correspondent Sergt. Bill Burnett, formerly of The Washington Post. The fighting story of Marine Staff Sergt. Joseph Temes, better known to Washington fight fans as the "Greek Bulldog," was received at the same time. It was written by Marine Combat Correspondent Jeremiah O'Leary of 1222 Quincy st. ne.

A Marine engineering outfit led by Second Lieut. A. C. Johnson, whose parents live in Washington, and Warrant Officer S. H. Vuncannon of 1613 18th st. se., had camped in the roots of two huge trees in a Bougainville swamp when they received orders to move up at night, Burnett wrote. Despite the extra work, the men were glad they moved out when Jap bombers the following day hit the shelter trees, shearing them off to two-foot stumps.

"The Greek Bulldog," who fought a draw with Freddie Miller for the National Boxing Association featherweight championship, to the delight of Washington boxing fans, traded his gloves for a .30-caliber rifle in 1940 and is now Staff Sergt. Joseph Temes, USMC, somewhere in the southwest Pacific, O'Leary wrote. Landing with Marine reinforcements on Guadalcanal Joe's outfit has engaged the Japs on 42 separate occasions, and he is looking for return bouts. His sister, Mrs. Rose Goodwin, lives at 605 6th st. sw. here.

Preinduction Tests Unaffected By Draft Appeals

Draft boards are ordering 1-A men to report for preinduction physical examinations whether or not they have appealed their 1-A classification, a Selective Service spokesman said yesterday.

The idea is to get the preinduction physical out of the way first, and determine whether the man is fit for service, before proceeding to hold hearings or otherwise consider an appeal which he may make within 10 days after being classified 1-A.

In such cases, the spokesman explained, the 21-day period of civilian life, which every registrant is guaranteed after passing a preinduction physical, dates from the day the draft board mails the man his certificate of physical fitness and not from the day his appeal is finally turned down.

Device Marks Patient for Knife

Memphis, Tenn., Jan. 19 (AP).—An X-ray device which locates within 60 seconds all the bullets and shrapnel in a man's body and marks him for the surgeon's incision will reduce materially the Army's mortality rate, officers predicted today at the first demonstration of the instrument.

Designed by O. Conrad Hollstein, Westinghouse X-ray engineer at Baltimore, Md., the machine was approved by the Army, and a contract for the manufacture of 2000 was awarded Westinghouse.

The life of a soldier wounded by gunfire or a fragmentation bomb may depend on the rapidity of diagnosis, Col. Alfred A. de Lorimier said. An Army doctor for 17 years, he saw a need for the device and submitted requirements.

"How many fragments have penetrated his body, where they are and what is the path the surgeon's knife must follow to remove them? This X-ray unit rapidly and accurately answers all these questions," Col. de Lorimer explained.

3 Capital Area Men Missing, 3 Reported Wounded in Action

Three Washington area men are missing in action and three have been wounded, according to announcements made yesterday by the War and Navy Departments.

WERBER

Missing are Staff Sergt. Jack L. Werber of 829 Delafield pl. nw., Pvt. Earle G. Wilhoite, jr., of 1815 19th st. nw. and Staff Sergt. Herbert M. King of 104 13th st. se. Wounded are Pvt. Roy Yockey, jr., of 928 Ingraham st. nw., Pvt. John D. Wildman of Bowie, Md., and Pvt. William F. Pasco, jr., of 519 3d st. ne.

Sergeant Werber, 25, who was reported missing in action in the Mediterranean area November 26, is a native of Germany. Born of Polish parents living in German held territory, he was forced to leave the country during the Jewish purge. A resident of Washington for six years, he made his home with Dave Sauber, operator of a cleaning establishment, for whom he also worked as a chemist. He was trained as an Air Corps photographer and gunner, and went to North Africa six months ago.

Private Wilhoite, 30, an Air Corps administrative clerk overseas since November 1, has been missing in action since November 26, the War Department has informed his wife, Mrs. Mary E. Wilhoite of the 19th st. address.

WILHOITE

A native of California, Private Wilhoite came to Washington as a boy and graduated from Western High School. He was formerly employed by the FHA.

Staff Sergeant King, tail gunner on a Marauder bomber, was reported missing in action over German territory December 13. His plane was seen to plunge to earth with a wing shot free. Several of the men aboard were able to take to their parachutes, it was believed. Details of the action were learned by King's mother, Mrs. Icie F. Seymour of 13th st., on Tuesday when she received a letter from one of the men who flew in the same squadron.

KING

The 21-year-old gunner was a student at Eastern High School when mustered into the Army with the National Guard in 1940. He transferred from antiaircraft service to the Air Corps in September, 1941, and received his wings at Tampa, Fla., November, 1942. Overseas since May, he had been decorated with the Air Medal and two Oak Leaf Clusters.

Private Yockey, 30, received four shrapnel wounds while serving in Italy on December 5. His wife, Mrs. Donna M. Yockey of Ingraham st., has been informed he is now at a rest camp in Sicily. Prior to entering the Army in April, 1943, he was a supervisor with the Veterans' Administration. Trained for Infantry service at Camp Robinson, Ark., he went overseas in September.

YOCKEY

Private Wildman received serious back injuries December 8 during fighting in Italy, his wife, Mrs. Mary E. Wildman of Bowie, has learned. The 20-year-old Infantry soldier, among the first to land at Salerno, had previously received the Purple Heart for injuries received early in the campaign.

Born in Bowie, Wildman graduated from the high school there and attended Strayer Business College. He was employed as a clerk with the Treasury Department before entering the Army a year ago.

WILDMAN

Private Pasco, 20, was wounded November 21 while serving with the Marines in the Gilbert Islands. A native of Washington, he attended St. Joseph's parochial school and McKinley High School. He was a clerk at the General Accounting Office when he entered the service in November, 1942. Following training at Parris Island, he was sent to the Pacific last January.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Bar Association Probes Retirement Fund Scheme

The Civil Service Commission yesterday cleared its skirts of the get-rich-quick retirement fund scheme at the expense of former Federal workers which was exposed here yesterday. The commission revealed it had referred the entire matter to the grievance committee of the District of Columbia Bar Association, which has under "active consideration" the case of the Washington law firm that sought to get retirement funds for former Government employes at 20 per cent of the amount due. The decision of the grievance committee is expected to be made next week. The commission statement answered many questions, but this column still believes an investigation by the Remspeck Civil Service Investigating Committee must be made to identify the person or persons who gave the list of former employes to the legal firm. To repeat, it has the earmarks of a racket.

In its statement, the commission cited these "facts": In January, 1939, the commission was called upon by a member of Congress on a number of occasions to furnish a list of names of those individuals no longer in the Federal service who had not claimed refund of retirement contributions from the retirement fund, together with their last known address. In the middle of 1940, another member of Congress made a similar request. Early in 1941, another member indicated his intention of introducing an amendment to the independent offices appropriation bill requiring the commission to use a portion of it funds to prepare such a list. At that time, the commission told the Senate Appropriations Committee that it would compile such a list and furnish it to Congress if the rider was withdrawn.

On January 22, 1942, copies of the list were furnished to members of Congress who had requested the information. On January 26, 1942, the commission notified the Senate committee that it had complied with its promise. But on January 26, 1942, just four days after several members of Congress were given the list, a Washington law firm sent letters to persons whose names were on the list. The letter said in part: "We are very anxious to establish a contact with Mr. —— who was employed in the (name of agency) up to ——. If you are not the party we desire to communicate with we are wondering if you could tell us the address of Mr. —— or the address of someone who might represent him."

A follow-up letter went out to persons who answered the first letter and it said in part:

"Our office has specialized for some time past in representing both the U. S. contractors and employes of the U. S. Government in securing additional amounts claimed to be due. We note that there is an amount still due you in connection with your former employment in the Government, and we are, therefore, writing to ask if you would be interested in securing refund of same. In most cases of this character the amount approximates $——. If you would care to have our firm represent you in this matter, we would be glad to do so for a fee equal to 20 per cent of the amount recovered with the understanding that there would be no charge whatever unless we are successful. If this is satisfactory, kindly execute and return the inclosed power of attorney and this matter will have our prompt attention."

A week later the commission attempted to stop this easy-money venture by sending to 20,183 persons who had unrefunded deductions of $5 or more in the fund the following letter: "A survey of the records of the commission indicates that certain retirement deductions stand to your credit in the retirement and disability fund on account of past service. It is assumed that you have left your money in the fund in the expectation of returning to the Government service in the future and thus retaining a potential credit toward annuity. However, if at any time you wish to withdraw the money to your credit the commission will furnish upon your request the necessary blank on which application may be made for refund. It will be wholly unnecessary for you to incur any expense for the hiring of an attorney in order to obtain your refund."

The commission makes the flat statement that the list of names and addresses was furnished only to members of Congress and that no other person, either in or out of the Government service, was given a copy. The points the finger of blame at Capitol Hill. But who were these members? Why did they want such a list? And which one, if any, gave the list to the law firm? That's the question that must be answered, and only a congressional committee can get the answer. But we all know that any committee of Congress shies away from any inquiry where a member of Congress may be involved. This is unfortunately the case despite the fact that public airings of this sort would do much to build up faith in the Congress. A Ramspeck Committee investigator yesterday was gathering facts in the case in event the committee decides to ...

Bond Beauty Begins Tour In Capital

Arriving yesterday for a two-day whirlwind bond selling tour of the city, attractive 19-year-old, Linwood Gisclard, the "Maid of Cotton," was met at Union Station by a delegation of 17 Southern Congressmen.

The brunet Louisiana University senior, who won her title in competition with 75 Southern beauties in a contest held recently in Miami, was escorted to the Capitol for luncheon. There Commissioner Guy Mason presented her the Key to the City.

Miss Gisclard, opening a Nation-wide bond-selling tour with her appearance here, assured the Congressmen that "everything possible would be done to raise funds so vital to the invasion thrusts of our fighting men."

Visits Soldier Wards

Later in the day she visited the soldier wards at Walter Reed Hospital, the Stage Door Canteen, and spoke from the stage of the Earle Theater.

Today the Cotton Queen will attend the Kiwanis Club luncheon at the Mayflower at 12:30, visit the American Mariner, the Liberty ship on view at the Municipal Wharf at 2:30 p. m., and appear at the Capitol Theater at 9 p. m.

Some 2500 employes of the Department of Agriculture filed through the Mariner yesterday morning to see the 10,000-ton sample of war equipment purchased by their bonds. On Monday other Agriculture workers toured the vessel, investing $5000 in bonds at booths along the inspection route.

To Present "T" Flag

Tonight the U. S. Treasury will present the coveted Treasury "T" flag to the officers and crew of the Mariner in a ceremony at 7:30 p. m. More than 90 per cent of the crew members are buying bonds through the payroll savings program with more than 10 per cent of the payroll allotted. Preceding the ceremony, the U. S. Maritime Service Training Station Band from Sheepshead Bay, N. Y., which has been assigned to the ship for its stay here during the Fourth War Loan campaign, will present a concert. The vessel is docked at 11th and Maine ave. sw. and is open to the public daily from 2:30 to 5 and from 7:30 to 10 p. m.

Meanwhile, groups throughout the city were going forward with bond-selling activities. Employes of Goldenberg's Department Store announced that they have inaugurated a "Buy a Plane" campaign designed to raise $75,000, the cost of a P-51 Mustang pursuit plane.

Club Goal Is $100,000

The Soroptimist Club, through its war-service chairman, Mrs. Mary C. H. Chmylko, reported that the organization has set a goal of $110,000, the cost of an ambulance plane, while Dr. Charles J. Demas of the Ahepa War Bond Committee announced that the American Hellenic organization will raise $350,000, the cost of a heavy bomber. From the Hebrew Home for the Aged came a pledge to raise $15,000 during the campaign.

In the national campaign, the Central Prison of Raleigh, N. C., announced that it was the first State unit to surpass its quota. The prison set itself an unofficial goal of $4000 and inmates raised $4162

Capital Garage Storage Room Is Rent-Free

Storage space in the old Capital Garage used by the Bureau of the Census is "rent free" as far as the Federal Works Agency is concerned, it was learned yesterday.

Ernest E. Hall, executive officer of the Federal Works Agency, revealed that the estimated $70,000 rental which might be charged against the Census Bureau, is not on a reimbursable basis.

In other words, the $70,000 a year which the Federal Works Agency says is the rental value of the space in which the Census Bureau stores old files, is purely hypothetical.

There is no charge and no credit on the books, Hall said.

The records were taken from storage at Suitland, Md., where the Census Bureau is still located, and brought down into the heart of the business district of war-crowded Washington, 10 miles from the office which has supervision over them.

Hall said his agency was doing a selling job with other agencies trying to get them to make use of the garage storage and other facilities. This, he said, was proving a slow business, but that it was hoped eventually to convince bureau heads that the Federal Works Agency is not attempting to take over control of their cars.

It was pointed out that the Public Buildings Administration assumed responsibility for placing the Census Bureau files in the building, and that the Solid Fuels Administration also stored some files there. These files are described as semiactive.

Only a little more than two-thirds of the space allotted for the storing of records has been utilized.

'Maid of Cotton' Arrives

Harris & Ewing

Mrs. Roosevelt was at Union Station yesterday to greet Miss Linwood Gisclard, of Donaldson, La., the "Maid of Cotton" for 1944, when she arrived to participate in bond rallies during the Fourth War Loan campaign.

Rabies Control in District Extended for Three Months

District Commissioners yesterday extended rabies control for another three months on request of Health Officer George C. Ruhland.

Dr. Ruhland said there had been four new cases of rabies since January 1. More than 100 persons were bitten by rabid dogs since last April, he said.

The continuing order requires muzzling of dogs; quarantining of dogs brought to this area and of dogs suspected of having been exposed to rabies; reporting of dogs with rabies to the health officer; confining of dogs which have bitten persons; quarantine or destruction of dogs known to have been bitten by rabid animals and destruction of rabid dogs.

The poundmaster is required to impound any dog found on public space known to have been bitten by a rabid dog and release to the owner only if he agrees to quarantine it for not less than 60 days.

The order also instructs police to enforce the regulations and urges all persons to prevent dogs from running at large.

Police have followed the policy of warning owners of unmuzzled dogs running at large and arresting them if the dog is found loose a second time, according to Inspector Harvey G. Callahan. Many owners have posted collateral during the past few months. Should an owner refuse to post collateral, Inspector Callahan said the same procedure would apply as does in the breaking of any District ruling. A warrant would be served, and the case referred to court where a fine to the amount of $300 might be imposed.

Questioned about the bond selling dog, Rebel, Army Air Force mascot, Dr. Ruhland said he was not affected by the ruling. He said that so long as Rebel was kept on a leash, his owners were complying with restrictions

Escortless Attorney for WAC Detained by Pentagon Guard

James J. Laughlin, attorney for WAC First Lieut. Virginia Wight, who is on trial before an Army Reclassification Board, on various charges, was "detained" by the Pentagon building guard yesterday for 20 minutes for not having an escort.

The incident occurred as Laughlin was attempting to get to the building cafeteria at a recess in the hearing.

After freeing him, however, the guard posted a corporal to watch him while he was eating, Laughlin said.

"However, that did not affect my appetite," he declared.

Stopped while going along one of the building corridors, after attending the morning session Laughlin said he was queried as to the whereabouts of his escort, which he did not have.

"Am I under arrest?" he asked.

"No," was the reply from the guard.

"Then I am free to come and as I please," Laughlin said.

"Oh, no, you're not," he was told.

After being detained for 20 minutes, he was permitted to continue on to the cafeteria, under the watchful eye of the corporal.

Laughlin said that the hearing would continue today and probably tomorrow. He refused to discuss the case other than to say it was going satisfactorily and that he was impressed with the fairness of the board.

Protests to President

Attorney James J. Laughlin sent to President Roosevelt last night a protest to the conviction before a military tribunal of an Army technical sergeant who, the attorney stated, was not allowed counsel.

The protest refers to Joseph A. Ramm, formerly stationed at National Capital Airport, who was found guilty, Laughlin stated, of selling seven cartons of cigarettes marked "Not to be sold." Laughlin said Ramm was given the maximum sentence of six months' imprisonment after being demoted to a private. Ramm is now in a Bolling Feild guardhouse.

Laughlin said that military authorities promised Ramm's trial would be postponed because Laughlin was before another military board in the case of WAC Lieut. Virginia Wight.

But without his being informed, it was held yesterday, Laughlin said.

Lusk Warns of 'Economic Ruin' In Housing Debate With Ihlder

The Community Chest and the White House were dragged into the public housing controversy last night as Rufus S. Lusk, debating the issue with NCHA's John Ihlder, foresaw "socialism" and "economic ruin" in any attempt by the Government to help house low-income groups.

For himself, Lusk, who is president of the Washington Taxpayers League, told a meeting of the Columbia Heights Citizens Association in Powell Junior High School he "would not contribute to the Community Chest because one of its agencies is engaged in activities to put me out of business."

The agency he identified as the Washington Housing Association, which "together with Mrs. Roosevelt and Mrs. Rosenman, whose husband lives in the White House," are pushing "this socialistic conspiracy."

As Ihlder outlined the work of NCHA — to provide temporary housing for warworkers during the emergency and later to resume its program of slum clearance to allow low income families decent homes at no eventual cost to the taxpayer—Lusk warned of the peculiarity" that "all totalitarian governments seem to go in heavily for housing."

Reminded by Ihlder that Great Britain and Holland were among the countries pioneering in low-cost public housing, Lusk said that he, too, was opposed to slums.

"But I am no revolutionary," he added, and his dislike for slums didn't mean that he should propose "one of those New Deal solutions" to replace them. Although, "sometimes, when I hear Mr. Ihlder, I am almost convinced, myself," Lusk said.

School Board Takes Over Child Center

Administrative control of day care centers in the District went to the Board of Education yesterday as members of the board voted unanimously to assume responsibility for the project. In another action the board removed, effective July 1, 1944, school supervision of high school sororities and fraternities.

It is expected that under board control the cost of operating the centers can be reduced by 30 per cent. The general effect of the reorganization, will be to reduce the number of directors, and to place the administration of the financial aspects of the project directly under the business office of the public schools. Board supervision was the result of a request by the District Commissioners. The change was suggested by the FWA which administers the Lanham Act funds that finance the project.

In rescinding all regulations concerning sororities and fraternities, the board placed these organizations beyond the supervision of school officials. A new rule adopted by the board provides that the secret societies must hold their activities outside of the schools and that they can take no part in school life.

Also approved by the board yesterday was a recommendation that the regulations be amended to forbid the personal solicitation of funds from school employes. Action followed a report made by Superintendent of Schools Robert L. Haycock that the change had the support of school employes. The new rule permits teachers to handle the matter of contributions within their own group toward presents for brides, the sick and for retiring colleagues.

A motion empowering school officials to seek a site for a new school to replace the Hine Junior High School also was approved by the board.

U. S. Rests Case Against Steinberg

Justice Matthew F. McGuire of District Court is expected to be asked today to direct a verdict of innocent in the case of Albert W. Steinberg, 43, accused of embezzling $9300 from Forman, Inc., wholesale liquor firm, where he was a bookkeeper.

The Government, through Assistant United States Attorneys Bernard Margolius and John L. Ingoldsby, rested its case yesterday. Then Defense Attorney Austin Canfield announced he would ask for a dismissal of all of the 71 counts of the indictment. Margolius agreed to the dismissal of two counts only.

On the witness stand for most of the day was Lieut. Comdr. John R. Fitzpatrick, former dean of Columbus Law School and attorney for the Forman firm. Under cross-examination, he testified there were "rumors around town" in 1942 concerning a shortage in the Forman accounts. Fitzpatrick didn't inform Alexander Forman, president, of the statements because of no verification, he said.

"Besides," said Fitzpatrick, "it was only a rumor and I didn't consider it any of my business."

Fitzpatrick previously had told the jury Steinberg had admitted the embezzlement to him.

Bolling Field To Fly Plasma To Texas Boy

Bolling Field yesterday pledged to keep up the life line from Washington donors of plasma to 4-year-old Billy Meers in Dallas.

Airport officials prepared to take a shipment of 15 additional pints of plasma to Billy's sickbed as soon as Gallinger Hospital's blood clinic finishes processing the blo... 50 donors to have volunteered so far.

The Washington Post, which suggested the plan to Gallinger upon receipt of a number of appeals from residents, dispatched nine pints of plasma to Dallas by airplane last week.

Medical students at Walter Reed Hospital appeared at the hospital Saturday to donate blood for the Texas boy, who is suffering from an incurable kidney ailment, and a spokesman for the group declared that at least 20 soldiers will come back every Saturday to keep Billy alive. The first donation was made by 23 boys.

Meanwhile, officials at Chanute Field, Ill., said that a Flying Fortress took 200 pints of blood to Dallas yesterday.

BARNABY By Crockett Johnson

They've given me a big job at the plant . . . We've got to prove to the government that the proposed dam for the river must be built at once. I'm to put all the data on the town's war industries together in a convincing argument . . . I may have to go to Washington. . . We've had no help from our congressman . . . Can't even find him—
You can't find Mr. O'Malley, Pop? My Fairy Godfather?... I'll get him—
Hush, Barnaby. . . Yes. This fellow O'Malley we elected to Congress doesn't answer letters or wires—
He's been very busy—
BARNABY! GO TO BED!
But I'll get him to build the dam for you, Pop. If you tell me the kind you want—

Board of Eight Named to Visit Three District Hospitals

Welfare, Religious Representatives Chosen for Posts

For the first time in the history of local municipal institutions, a board of visitors composed of eight welfare and religious representatives has been appointed for Gallinger, Glenn Dale and Upshur Street Hospitals, the District Commissioners announced yesterday.

In accordance with recommendations made two months ago by a Senate District Subscommittee investigating Gallinger conditions, the board will make a check of cleanliness and administrative standards at least four times yearly.

Members, who will be notified formally within the next two days, are: Mrs. Stanley Reed, wife of the Associate Justice of the Supreme Cout; Mrs. Harold N. Marsh, active in welfare work; Mrs. Willis W. Jones, former president of local and national Negro graduate nurses associations; the Rev. Edward G. Latch of Metropolitan Methodist Church; the Right Rev. Msgr. Lawrence J. Shehan of St. Patrick's Catholic Church; Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld of Washington Hebrew Congregation; the Rev. E. L. Harrison of Shiloh Baptist Church, and Rudolph Berger, chairman of the Variety Club Welfare Committee.

Senator Holman (Republican) of Oregon chairman of the Senate triumvirate which made a sweeping investigation of Gallinger, resulting in the resignaton of Supt. Edgar A. Bocock, had cited the need for such a board of visitors in his subcommittee report.

Further Action Slated on Gallinger

By James E. Chinn

The Sente District Committee will hold its first meeting of the new session of Congress tomorrow and probably will take action on the undisposed of recommendations of the subcommitee which investigated Gallinger Hospital.

These recommendations call for removal of Commissioner Guy Mason, Health Officer George C. Ruhland and Dr. Joseph L. Gilbert and Charles P. Cake of the hospital staff.

The only recommendation which the commiteee has approved so far asked for removel of Dr. Edgar A. Bocock, who subsequently resigned as superintendent of Gallinger.

While the committee meeting was called primarily to consider a number of pending bills, Senator Holman (Republican) of Oregon, who headed the investigating subcommittee, said he would urge immediate action on the Gallinger report which has been allowed to slumber since last November.

Principal bills on the committee's calendar would provide for election of District delegates to the nat... political conventions, prohibit advertising of liquor prices, and provide for the inspection and registration of bicycles.

A subcommittee handling the McCarran "home rule" bill also will meet tomorrow, an hour before the full committee session at 11 a. m., to consider proposed revisions. These changes were suggested during extensive hearings on the measure last month.

City News in Brief

Cashier Released on Bond In Fund Embezzlement Case

Mrs. Elsie Rose Rockwood, 42, of 1754 Lanier pl. nw., a bookkeeper employed by the Arthur Jordan and Homer L. Kitt piano companies, was out on $2500 bond yesterday following her arraignment late Tuesday before Commissioner Needham Turnage on a charge of embezzlement.

Although Mrs. Rockwood was arraigned on one specific charge of embezzling $451.09 on October 13, 1943, Sergt. Dewey Guest of the Check and Fraud Squad said yesterday that she had confessed shortly after her arrest to taking between $45,000 and $50,00 over a period of 3½ years.

Mrs. Rockwood, who was arrested by Precinct Detective Clyde Rouse while she was working at the Jordan Piano Co. Tuesday, was employed as a bookkeeper and cashier by both companies at a $35 weekly salary. According to Sergt. Guest, Mrs. Rockwood pleaded guilty to the charge of $451.09 embezzlement and said she had used the money to bet on horses, sometimes using as much as $75 to $125 a day.

Union Fights Cut in Fares

Opposition to any changes in fares charged by local transit companies that would affect wages or working conditions was voiced yesterday by Central Labor Union.

In a resolution sent to PUC Chairman James H. Flanagan, the union protested against proposed reduction of fares to four tokens for 25 cents and car passes for $1, urged last month by the Maryland and District Industrial Union Council and the Washington Industrial Union Council in a petition to the PUC. The two organizations asked that public hearings on reduced fares be opened by February 1, but as yet PUC has taken no action.

Home Is Burgled

Police yesterday were looking for the thief or thieves who broke into the home of Lewis Hopsnmaier, at 2525 Chesapeake st. nw., Tuesday night and stole jewelry, cash and a fur coat. The police estimate the loss at $695, far under the $5000 estimate of Hopsnmaier. Entrance was gained by breaking a window in the basement, police said.

Wife Again Sues Prince

Prince Guido Pignatelli of 1800 Foxhall rd. nw., was sued by his divorced wife, Mrs. Constance Wilcox Pignatelli, yesterday in District Court for maintenance of his minor daughter, Marie Elena, pending disposition of another suit brought by Mrs. Pignatelli.

Mrs. Pignatelli

In the earlier suit the wife seeks $8000 which she says she has expended for care of the daughter since 1935 when she says Pignatelli parted from her. She also asks all future maintenance.

Mrs. Pignatelli, who resides in Madison, Conn., is represented by Attorney Lester Wood.

Transit and Expansion

Edward D. Merrill, president of Capital Transit Co., yesterday warned housing authorities and city planners to take public transportation problems into consideration before scattering the city population in outlying districts.

Citing a trend toward ever-growing city areas since the arrival of the automobile in a speech before the Rotary Club at the Willard Hotel, Merrill questioned the advisability of building superhighways after the war which would accentuate this tendency.

He predicted that this would not only result in increased costs to the transportation companies but would also considerably cut down on services to the public.

Albert W. Atwood, president, said the Rotary Club will cosponsor with Station WMAL a series of entertainment programs for wounded men at Walter Reed Hospital, Bethesda Naval Medical Center, Forest Glen, and Mount Alto Hospital, beginning tomorrow at 2 p. m.

John A. Reilly, chairman of the Fourth War Loan Drive, appealed to the club members to help make the campaign a success.

Woman Files $100,000 Suit

Mrs. Sarah H. Riggles, 40, of 1321 Fairmont st. nw., filed suit in District Court yesterday for $100,000 against the Capital Transit Co. and the G. B. Macke Corp., a vending machine firm. She states she suffered a broken back August 12 when a bus on which she was a passenger collided with a truck owned by the Macke Corporation at Fourteenth st. and Golf Course rd. nw. The suit was filed by Attorney Dorsey Offutt.

Good Conduct Awards

Armstrong High School's Good Conduct Club will issue certificates to 11 students in ceremonies at the school auditorium at 1:30 p. m. today. Initiated in November, the club has been widely acclaimed for combating juvenile delinquency.

Officer Oliver Cowan of No. 13 Precinct, who has been instrumental in improving existing conditions, will be the guest speaker.

D. C. Committee to Meet

Chairman Randolph yesterday called a meeting of the House District Committee next Wednesday to consider the Hebert bill to increase the powers of the Commissioners and a miscellaneous assortment of other measures which have been pending since the last session of Congress.

Meredith Reappointed

District Commissioners yesterday approved reappointment of William P. Meredith of 2122 California st. nw. for a second four-year term as a member of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board at a salary of $5000.

MEREDITH

Meredith has been associated with the board since 1934. He was the board's executive secretary for seven years.

Before that he served as secretary and treasurer of several real estate corporations in Washington. He was also associated with a New York real estate firm. In the last war, he was an examiner with the War Labor Board.

Bandit Gets 16 Watches

A young Negro held up Irving Prelube at the point of a gun in his jewelry store at 1826 7th st. nw. yesterday morning and made away with 16 gold watches. According to police, Prelube said the thief, who was wearing a soldier's khaki field jacket, carried away the watches in a brown paper bag.

Physical Report

Representative Stefan (Republican) of Nebraska, who last year led a movement in the House for increased appropriations with which to expand the physical education program in the District public schools, disclosed yesterday he planned to ask Supt. Robert L. Haycock for a report showing to what extent it had been beneficial to boys preparing for military service.

"I want to see the physical training program continued, and in no way retarded," he declared, "and will urge larger appropriations if they are necessary."

$242 Found in Railway Car

Another honest man was brought to light yesterday when police reported $242 in bills had been turned over to the Twelfth Precinct after the money was found in a Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railroad car by a Negro car cleaner, Jimmy McClelland, 32, of 28 N st. nw. McClelland will again come into possession of the money, this time permanently, if it is not claimed within six months, police said.

Well-Equipped Dog

Signs-of-our-times note: Dogs who wish to live in Washington sometimes even bring references, as evidenced by a want ad in the "rooms wanted" column:

"Young lady wishes well-heated room in refined Northwest home where house-broken toy dog is welcome, highest references."

Liquor Hearing Today

Public hearing of proposed changes in District liquor regulations will begin today at 10 a. m. in the old District Building, room 500.

Nine proposals requiring additional record keeping by wholesalers and retailers, display of one-twenty fifth of retailer's stock and posting or marking of prices will be considered. Another proposal would prohibit credit sales between wholesalers and retailers.

Nurses Seek Private, Ward Pay Equality

Plans for equalizing salaries for nurses on ward duty with those on private service will be submitted soon to the Graduate Nurses Association for approval before being sent to the American Hospital Association, it was learned yesterday.

The recommendations are being drawn up by a special committee organized two weeks ago to formulate a workable means of presenting their suggestions first to their own group and ultimately to the hospital association, Miss Edith Beattie, executive secretary of GNA, explained.

She emphasized that there has been no "grousing" among nurses for the change and that she was confident the recommendations would be received favorably by the Hospital Association, which she described as "always more than cooperative" with the nurses' group.

Main difficulties, it was pointed out, are that some nurses who have served specified lengths of time on private duty would rather lay off work entirely than accept employment on ward duty for several days, as required under existing regulations. Ward and general service pay scales are generally lower than those for private duty nurses which, according to one registry, is $9 and meals for a 12-hour day and $6 and meals for an eight-hour day. Ward and general service nurses receive about $100 monthly and complete maintenance.

Truck Injures One Boy, Another Hurt Coasting

Edward Condolon, 6, of 710 N st. nw., suffered leg injuries yesterday when he slipped and fell in front of a truck in front of his house. He was removed to Providence Hospital and treated for a sprained leg. He was later released from the hospital.

Police said the truck was driven by Thomas R. Duckett, 33, of 819 3d st. nw. The boy is a first grade pupil at Immaculate Conception School.

In a sledding accident late Tuesday night, Edward J. Bryant, 15, of 33 Seaton pl. nw., received back and head injuries after his sled crashed into a car parked on Bryant st. ne. just east of Lincoln rd.

To a Movie Career Woman

I

O Rosalind Russell, did you never,
Utter a sentence that was not clever,
Or stammer with utter lack of poise
When your irate boss had become a Big Noise?

II

Did you never enter an office musty,
And sit at a desk that was old and dusty,
In a splintery chair and get a run,
In your last pair of hose out of nylon spun?

III

By handsome males were you always hounded?
Did you never find your office life bounded
By other women thick as bees,
And married men with baggy knees?

IV

Did you ever attain a tailored chic,
In a suit fast becoming an antique?
Did you ever get a competitor down,
Without the aid of a Travis Banton gown?

V

Were you always able to spend your money,
Buying a dress or gadget you thought was a honey?
Did you never stand in a postoffice line,
To send a money order to Aunt Clementine?

VI

Were you always able a cab to beckon,
And not of the fare to think or reckon?
Was a ritzy restaurant your inveterate rule?
Did you never wait for a lunch counter stool?

VII

Did you never know what it is to be tired?
Did you never feel lonely and undesired?
Did you never spend an evening at home,

VIII

Did you ever do a stint at a desk,
Instead of in hotel lobbies arabesque?
Did you ever have friends of drab sobriety,
Who were not the darlings of cafe society?

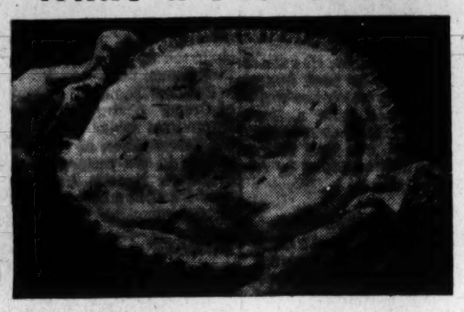
IX

Have all your beaux had glamour and dash?
Did you never have one without any cash,
Or one of the plain type known as "white collar"?
Did you never lend a man a dollar?

X

Did you always ponder which one to take?
Did you always have a decision to make,
Between "freedom" and love—did you never suppose
What on earth would happen if he didn't propose?

What a Pie Crust!



Use lard in your favorite recipe or try this new method. Ingredients: 1¾ c. sifted flour, ½ c. lard, 1 tsp. salt, ¼ c. water. With spoon, blend lard into about ½ c. of the flour, until dry particles are blended into one ball. Cut in rest of flour and salt, until particles stop getting smaller and start getting larger. Add all water at once and stir only until ball of dough is formed and bowl is clean. Divide into 2 balls. Roll each out separately on lightly floured board to ⅛ to 1/16-inch thickness.

USE LARD—save points, save money. Lard goes further—very high shortening power. Easy to use. Digestible. Pure, wholesome, rich in energy (more than 4000 calories per lb.)

Petworth Club To Entertain Servicemen

Convalescent boys at Walter Reed Hospital and the new section at Forest Glen are receiving the attention of the Soldiers Entertainment Committee of the Petworth Woman's Club, under the leadership of Mrs. F. V. Brown as chairman. Plans are being made for a party in February at Walter Reed and every six weeks at one of the hospitals. They also supply gift packages for the patients in the acute surgery ward of 40 beds.

The funds for this activity are raised by a series of card parties and by donations. The first party of the new year was held yesterday at the home of Mrs. T. S. Tincher. Other members of the entertainment committee are Mrs. A. C. Eastburn, Mrs. Alice Waite, Mrs. G. M. Campbell, Mrs. Otto Hammerlund, Mrs. D. H. Reed, Mrs. C. L. Fairall, Mrs. F. J. MacMaugh and Mrs. R. K. Bailey.

The members of the Civic-Education Section, Mrs. G. E. Hudson, chairman, have been taking a "good neighbor tour" in a course of study on the Republics of Latin America. Monday evening, January 17, at 8 o'clock, they will have one of a series of open meetings at the Petworth Library for the members and their friends, with a color sound film of "our neighbors down the road," showing scenes along the Pan-American Highway in South America. Bolivia and Peru will be the subject with Mrs. Frank MacMaugh and H. O. Craver as leaders.

Women Democrats To Mark Founding Of Club at Dinner

The Woman's National Democratic Club will hold a dinner to celebrate the founding of the club at 7:30 this evening at their clubhouse.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will be the guest of honor and speaker. She will discuss the best way to face the challenge confronting women today.

Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, a founder of the club and its first president, is to be mistress of ceremonies.

The committee in charge of the dinner is under the direction of Mrs. Curtis Shears and includes Mrs. Albert Cox, Mrs. Wayne Chatfield Taylor, Mrs. Tom Clark, Mrs. Kenneth Royall, Mrs. William Jennings Price, Mrs. Edward Stitt, Mrs. C. O. Bradshaw, and Mrs. Paul Yoder.

Thin Girls Criticized For Not Eating Enough

(Continuing her series for women who want to get in trim and stay that way, today Ida Jean Kain directs her attention toward the thin girls. She tells them not to be so afraid of getting fat that they will give the best years of life to malnutrition.)

By Ida Jean Kain

A good many of you thin girls are so mortally afraid you might get fat that you abstain from all wholesome food. You give what should be the best years of your life to malnutrition.

Whenever I hear a girl thin enough to haunt a house inquire, "but isn't that fattening," it stops me from helping the fat ladies to reduce—sometimes for a whole day!

I do hope that none of you who are emaciatedly thin have the impression I'm encouraging you to keep your weight down. There is nothing I'd like better than to feed you up and put 10 or 15 pounds on you.

You don't seem to understand food. Food isn't merely to go on you; it's what you have to go on.

Enough of it and of the right kind is your source of energy and wellbeing. This doesn't mean you have to get fat, but you do have to eat.

Start the Day Right

Start with breakfast, apt to be your forgotten meal. If you are not hungry in the morning, that does not mean that you don't need breakfast, but that you haven't been getting it.

This is your first meal in about 12 hours and if you are to work through the morning, you need food to go on. Have fruit or the juice, a whole grain cereal with milk or toast and an egg, and your coffee and you get protein, minerals, vitamins and energy.

Lunch is your time to refuel, so don't shop for 45 minutes and try to eat in 10. You will be too tired to eat and too rushed to digest your food. It is very important for you to have lunch on the dot every day. Otherwise you lose your appetitie.

Keep Your Lunch Light

The meal should be light so that it doesn't slow you up during the afternoon and, usually, your best buy is the day's special, with milk and a simple dessert, like fruit with cream, a pudding with a custard base, or ice cream.

Your dinner must furnish the rest of the protective foods—meat, fish or chicken, two vegetables, one creamed and one a green leafy; a roll or bread and butter; an easily digested dessert, and a glass of milk.

It is an excellent plan for you to have a glass of hot milk after you get into bed at night. It warms, relaxes and helps you to fall asleep.

Congressional Club To Give 'Brunch'

The Congressional Club members are looking forward to the informal "brunch" with Mrs. Roosevelt as their guest and speaker, to be given at their clubhouse on New Hampshire ave. January 28. This meeting for members only was announced for January 7 but was postponed to the latter date.

Girl of 20 Has Lost Weight and Become Waspish And Insanely Jealous, Even of Women in Pictures, Since Marrying Divorced Older Man 10 Months Ago

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I'm 20, and I've been married about 10 months to a fellow about 10 years older than me. My husband was unhappily married before, and was separated when I met him. He has three children,—all girls, aged 11, 10 and 4. After our courtship of several months, he got a divorce and we were married. We have the three children with us. Since we've been married, I've lost about 15 pounds,—all of it within the first month after marriage. I have not been able to gain it back,—and I need that weight! Also, I have become terribly nervous and hot tempered. I pout and brood and cry over the least little thing, and sometimes I'm afraid that I am just the typical mean stepmother.

Another thing I have to fight constantly is a maddening jealousy of everybody. I feel I would like to keep my husband locked up in a room, where no one could get at him but me. I'm jealous of all women, even pictures of good looking women, or some hot little number seen in a movie. And of course, he's the guy who listens to all the troubles of every woman in his office. And at home, when he sits around loving and kissing the children,—especially the little one, a very affectionate child,—I just about go crazy.

When I get so madly jealous, I'm afraid to say anything, because I don't want him to know my feelings. But I am not able to hide my fury, for he always knows and tries to ignore it for a while. He gets so upset that when he finally asks what's wrong, he comes at me with fighting anger. And then there's a riot act. He thinks I'm mad and sulky without any reason; and I can't tell him what's wrong, for if I did, that would only make things worse. Anyhow, I always go to pieces if an argument starts, even if I'm in the right. Also, he is a lawyer, and he sure can put his training into practice in an argument. He won't concede anything. And he is so proud that it is always I who must say, "Darling, I'm sorry." And even then, he never has said that anything was his fault,—even if it really is. All he ever says is, "Forget it," or something equally non-committal.

I get so discouraged and upset. I can't handle the children, I lose my temper, I can't make my husband believe I love him, and my health gets worse all the time. I've honestly considered seriously almost every day for months, the possibility of just turning on the gas. I've been to my doctor about my health,—low metabolism, low blood count, etc.,—and I even went to a neurologist recently. I want to get hold of myself. I want to have fun and enjoy being young. I want the children and my husband to love me. I want to have a little pride, and not hate myself for the way I act. I don't really think I'm one of these people who enjoy being miserable. But what's wrong with me? What must I do?

DESPONDENT.

Case of Kid Trying To Do Adult's Job

DEAR DESPONDENT: In marrying a widower with three children, you took on a terrific assignment at the age of 20; and it is probable that the very magnitude of the job has got you down; and, indeed, that you have scarcely known what hit you, since the hour you came home from the preacher to try to cope with it. It is a job that would tax the wisdom of Minerva and the strength of Samson, at least in the initial stage of weaving a stout new pattern of family relatedness between the five parties involved in the contract, and establishing a smooth-running program of household management to accommodate so large a ready-made group. And, furthermore, it is a job for which you were about as well prepared,—in broad-gauge understanding, imaginative foresight, special training or seasoned character,—as a 20-year-old buck private, chosen at random for his good looks, would be to step into the shoes of, say, General Eisenhower.

You are frantically jealous of your husband for two reason, I think. First, I suspect, because you used strictly sex-appeal tactics in bagging him. At least, so far as you know, that was how you got him. If you had other and subtler appeal for him, you didn't know it then; nor do you realize it now. That's why you are constantly beside yourself with terror lest some other woman win his eye or allegiance away from you, using the same ammunition. Secondly, your jealousy has to do with a mounting dread conviction of your general, total inadequacy in the traditional great roles of womanhood,—the roles of wifehood, motherhood and sweetheart companion,—which, theoretically, a woman must be able to swing successfully, and simultaneously if need be, if she is to meet all the expectations of her man and thus reign constantly as queen in his affections.

Is Man Poor Picker In Field of Women?

PSYCHOLOGICALLY, you are as immature as any of your husband's three children; and far more of a trial to him, because of your greedy emotional selfishness,—as contrasted to their ingenuous and wholesome disposition to give, receive and observe spontaneous demonstrations of warm affection, as natural attributes of family or "social" feeling. What you were counting on, I suppose, in marrying your husband, was the prospect of becoming his "little darling,"—his best and really his only darling,—a completely unthinking, romantic assumption, that took account only of your wish to be exclusively loved by him; and failed utterly to reckon, soberly and prayerfully, with the stupendous practical problem of "family relations" which had to be undertaken, as the price of being his second wife; and solved, primarily by your wisdom and resourcefulness, to the content of the five persons immediately concerned, if the marriage were to justify itself.

Such, then, is the basis for your appallingly bad behavior, and chronic involuntary hysteria, in the role of second wife and stepmother. Whether your husband has shortcomings equally serious (though perhaps less visible to the eye), is a question for study. The fact that he is once-divorced, when combined with the complete collapse of your morale so soon after marrying him, may be profoundly significant. On the other hand, he may be innocent of blame; and only a "poor picker," in the field of women. In any event, my advice to you is to submit the problem to a psychiatrist at once,—for diagnosis and treatment. Since you live in Virginia, turn for guidance to Dr. Harvey Coghill, consultant to the Family Service Society, in Richmond, Va.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Volunteer USO Worker Opens Own Home to Honeymooners

By Genevieve Reynolds

A weary, far traveled soldier and his bride stepped up to the information desk at the USO Lounge in the Union Station and plaintively inquired about lodgings. There was a hectic week-end rush on, but handsome, affable Mrs. John Bush, volunteer worker who was holding down the desk, called every hotel, rooming house and service men's quarters in the city. Nowhere could she find them a room.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

Well, honeymooners couldn't sleep on the park benches, she mused to herself. Without a second thought to her maidless household, Mrs. Bush spontaneously opened her home at 2217 Kearney st. ne., to the couple. There they stayed, free of charge, until suitable rooms were located. That's only one sample of this kind hearted volunteer's generosity. Several other times she has invited servicemen to her home when no other rooms could be found for them.

Working the early morning shift at the canteen, she has been a faithful, never absent worker for more than a year. She gets up at 5 o'clock on Sunday mornings to work the 7 a. m. to 1 p. m. shift. Christmas and New Year's day were no exception. In fact, she insisted on working Christmas Day, when she was offered time off. But since her sons in the service—one in the Army and one in the Navy—couldn't be home with her, she just had to make the holidays happy for other mothers' sons. Her one daughter works for the Army Air Force out Pentagon way.

Each Sunday finds Mrs. Bush at the USO canteen. At 1 p. m. she rushes home to prepare a big dinner for her family. Seven o'clock finds her holding down the information desk at the stage door canteen. Her shift runs from 7 to 11 p. m., but often she stays on the job until after midnight. Thursdays she labors at the canteen food bar. For five or six hours — sometimes longer — she's making sandwiches, peeling potatoes or helping serve food.

Takes Red Cross Courses

Wednesdays find her serving a five-hour shift at the blood donor center in the Acacia. Between times she often goes back to the Stage Door Canteen to substitute for an absentee hostess. This happens always once a week and often twice. In the meantime, she has taken several Red Cross courses, including nutrition and first aid. In addition, she finds one afternoon a week to roll bandages for the Red Cross.

You'd think that schedule would be enough to keep any two women busy. No, tall, quick moving Mrs. Bush does still more. She belongs to the Flying Squad, Emergency Feeding Unit of the Red Cross and goes out once or twice a week to feed doughnuts and coffee to servicemen on night duty at the fields and posts around the city. When the Red Cross starts another fund drive, she will help serve box lunches at the Department of Commerce.

For any emergency, be it work at the Union Station USO Lounge, the Stage Door Canteen or Blood Donor Center in the Acacia Building, this hard working volunteer stands ready for any call. No matter what she might have planned for herself, she drops it and goes. Furthermore, she's always well groomed. When talking with her the other day in the USO Lounge, she looked chic in a black dress with pink dots, matching pink earrings, bracelet and necklace. Always she has a bandbox look.

Mrs. John Bush

The Stage Door Canteen has awarded her a certificate for one year of loyal service. Another was given her by the Citizens Defense Corps, D. C. Department of Civilian Defense for her excellent work in the medical corps. By the way, civilian defense is another of her wartime activities.

She Gives Up Club Work

For 23 years Mrs. Bush has been a member of the Riverdale Current Topics Club, which meets every Thursday. However, she's given up the club work for the duration. A furlough was granted her so that she could do canteen work.

Never before has amiable, warmhearted Mrs. Bush worked outside her home. Her occupation is strictly housewife. With the advent of the war, however, she felt that she had to do something and she wanted to work where she could have direct contact with the war effort. If she lands in a volunteer job where there's very little work to do, she quickly leaves it for a more arduous one.

There's no maid at home to do the dishes or prepare the meals. She does all her own household work, including the laundry, mopping, shopping and cooking. Yet, with all her volunteer work and daily household chores, she still finds time to entertain small groups of people at dinner—usually, some office workers or servicemen.

Her average number of volunteer hours run between 20 and 30 a week. However, some weeks she puts in between 40 and 50. On every volunteer job she has 100 per credit in hours of work done.

How does she manage to do so much? She confesses she never sits around dreading tasks, but does them quickly while most people would still just be thinking about them. Enjoying all the work thoroughly, she doesn't consider that she is making any sacrifice for the war. I'll argue that point.

G. W. Women To Celebrate Anniversary

The Columbian Women of the George Washington University will give a Golden Anniversary breakfast at the Hamilton Hotel Sunday at noon. The president of this organization, Mrs. Watson W. Eldridge, will be master of ceremonies, and the honor guests will be the speaker, Mrs. Ellen Woodward; also as an honor guest, Mrs. Joshua Evans, jr.; M. and Mme. Camille Chautemps and Miss Alma Harris.

The Columbian Women of the George Washington University are an organization of approximately 450 members who are graduates of the university, or who have attended the university long enough to acquire 30 credits, which admits them to membership.

This year, the Columbian Women are celebrating their fiftieth anniversary (1894-1944), and the breakfast marks the beginning of the celebration.

The object of this organization is to aid in education. Financial aid is given outright to worthy students of the George Washington University.

Hurry, Farmer Brown, Hide the Barn

With camouflage on everybody's lips these days, it is worth remembering that all camouflage isn't confined to war use. Paint, on the home front, has been used for getting "effects" since long before the word camouflage was thought of.

It hasn't always been used for concealment, of course, but even that may be added use of paint for civilian use after the war—fences, barns, garages and such like, will, we're told, be painted so that they blend into the landscape, instead of sticking out like sore thumbs as they do too often.—ELIZABETH MacRAE BOYKIN.

Miss Mary Ann Van Beek Is Bride Of Neal Herndon in Ceremony Here

WEDDINGS

The New York Avenue Presbyterian Church was the scene of the wedding of Miss Mary Ann Van Beek to Neal Herndon, USNR, on Monday. The Rev. Peter Marshall officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Peter Van Beek, who came from their home in Maquoketa, Iowa, to attend the wedding. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Neal M. Herndon of Washington.

She was escorted by her father, who gave her in marriage. Her gown was of ivory satin brocade with fingertip veil. She carried calla lilies. Her sister, Miss Everdean Van Beek, was maid of honor. She wore a gown of rose taffeta and carried an old-fashioned Colonial bouquet.

Corpl. George L. Herndon was best man for his brother. Ushers were Sergt. E. Draai, Sergt. T. Wharton, W. E. Daughtry and Lieut. M. B. Smith. A reception in the parish hall followed the ceremony.

After a short wedding trip the couple will return to Washington, where they will be at home in the Netherlands Apartments.

Vanderlinde—Springer

Miss Lucile Adelaide Springer and Lieut. (j. g.) Charles Edward Vanderlinde, USNR, were married Saturday in White Temple Methodist Church, Miami, Fla., with the Rev. Glenn C. James officiating. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Springer of Chevy Chase, Md. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Guy S. Vanderlinde of Muskegon, Mich.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore her mother's wedding gown of duchess satin and Venetian lace and an illusion veil held in place with a coronet of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of glamelias and bride's roses. Miss Margaret Springer was her sister's maid of honor. She wore a gown of aquamarine taffeta and a matching hat. Her bouquet was of talisman roses. Lieut. E. T. Carey, USNR, was best man.

Mrs. Vanderlinde is a graduate of Salem College, Winston-Salem, N. C. Lieutenant Vanderlinde is a graduate of Albion College in Albion, Mich., and a member of Sigma Nu fraternity. The couple are spending a short honeymoon in Florida.

Whitaker—Orth

Lieut. Robert Amesbury Whitaker, USNR, and his bride, the former Miss Mary Frances Orth, will make their home in Washington after a honeymoon in Florida. They were married at the Christ Church in Georgetown Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock with the Rev. Peyton Williams officiating.

The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Miles Hallacker Orth of Wayne, Pa., was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of white satin made along princess lines, with full gathered skirt and train. Her long veil was held in place with a coronet of seed pearls and her bouquet was of white gladioli and sweet peas. Miss Jane Orth, gowned in French blue taffeta and carrying deep pink carnations, was maid of honor. Lieut. (j. g.) Edward A. Whitaker, USNR, was best man. Wharton Whitaker, John H. Ohly, Burnham Kelly, Lieut. (j. g.) Roger P. Talmadge were ushers. A reception at the Hotel 2400 followed the ceremony. The bride attended Elmira College. The bridegroom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wharton Whitaker of Providence, R. I., attended Williams College.

Currie—Sparre

The marriage of Miss Teresita Sparre and Lieut. Francis Currie took place January 18, in the Lady Chapel of St. Patrick's, New York. Rev. Joseph F. Flannelly officiated.

Maid of honor for the ceremony was Miss Anne Rose of New Haven, Conn., and serving as best man was Lieut. R. J. Currie of the United States Air Corps, brother of the bridegroom.

The newlyweds will make their home in Washington, where Lieutenant Currie is on duty with the Bureau of Ships.

Clarke—Thompson

Lieut. (j.g.) William Henry Clarke, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Clarke of Washington, and his bride, the former Miss Ruth Lee Thompson, will make their home in Naylor Gardens after a short honeymoon. They were married at the Anacostia Naval Receiving Station Chapel Saturday with the Rev. Joseph N. Moody officiating.

The bride wore a gown of ice-blue satin with hat of blue ostrich feathers and an orchid corsage. Miss Judy Woodring of Chevy Chase, Md., maid of honor, wore a dress of dusty rose with matching flowers on a black hat. Her corsage was of pink flowers. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alban Thompson of Cumberland, Md.

The best man was Lieut. Frederick A. Meatyard, jr., and the ushers were Lieut. (j.g.) Robert M. Armagast and Lieut. Charles Stewart.

The bride received her B. S. and M. S. degrees at the University of Maryland, where she was a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma, Mortar Board, Phi Kappa Phi, Omicron Nu and Pi Delta Epsilon. Lieutenant Clarke was graduated from the University of Florida and attended Georgetown Law School. He is a member of Beta Theta Pi and Delta Theta Phi.

Congressional Wives Prepare To Help on the Hustings

"THERE OUGHT to be a law," began a Senator's wife, eyes twinkling, as she launched a lighthearted discussion of her personal problems. "There ought to be a law," she repeated, "whereby a politician's wife could get a temporary divorce while her husband runs for reelection. I honestly don't expect to see my husband at all . . . from now until the final votes are counted."

That's one angle. Quite an opposite point of view is held by the helpmeet who chooses to stand by her husband on the hustings, and prepares to win friends and influence voters from the platform as effectively as he does.

Time was, when even the most active of candidates' wives followed an old-fashioned line in campaign time. They graciously greeted and entertained constituents in their homes and in Washington. They managed campaign headquarters, in addition to carrying on their traditional roles at home. But, generally at husbandly insistence, they steadfastly refused to speak from the platform. Woman's place definitely was in the background during campaign years.

Today, the politician's wife who isn't prepared to speak publicly—over the air or out in it; before small and intimate groups, or in huge auditoriums—is the exception. Husbands have found that the Little Woman sometimes gets his cause across the footlights or over the microphone better than he can. A few, whose wives have timidly and consistently refrained from any type of public speaking, are now urging them to learn the trick before the campaign reaches the fever-heat stage.

ALL OF WHICH is by way of telling why the Congressional Club is sponsoring another series of lessons in Effective Public Speaking, which will start this morning. The teacher is Mrs. Hugh Butler, accomplished and motivating force in training numerous congressional wives as public speakers the past six years.

At an opening meeting of a similar series some years ago, Mrs. Roosevelt was present and agreed to answer a number of pertinent questions about whether wives of candidates should speak publicly.

Specifically, she was asked: "Is it wise for the wife of a man in public life to appear on the public platform where there is still a tradition that such wives should remain in the background?"

Her reply: "I should think it unwise unless she has something compelling to say, and is able to say it with distinction."

To the end, therefore, that they may be prepared to say something worth while—with distinction—a sizable number of congressional wives will meet at All Souls Church at 10:30 a. m. today and start a course designed to make them Grade-A speakers. Eight weeks from now, they will be ready to take an active part in the campaign, if their services are needed.

Several seasons ago a Representative's wife who enrolled in the course without undue enthusiasm thanked her stars she was prepared a couple of months later when she was unexpectedly called on to address 10,000 farmers from a hay wagon. The Governor had been asked to speak and couldn't get there at the last minute. The Representative was in Washington. Each political party wanted a chance to make the most of the moment, but it was finally agreed that the congressional wife was the right person to set off the guns at this plowing contest, and to make the speech of the day. With a confidence fostered and nourished in the public speaking course she had finished only a few weeks before, she arose to the occasion—and her feet—and came off with flying colors.

IN ENGLAND long before women were voting, the power of the woman platform speaker was recognized by men in public life. It is said there that many a man who wishes to go into Parliament tries to pick a wife who can make a good platform appearance.

In America opinion is still divided as to whether wives of politicians help or hinder their husbands by sharing a heavy speech program. Mrs. Roosevelt, of course, has cut a new pattern in this line. Holding to subjects in which women, primarily, will be interested—and carefully eluding as many controversial issues as possible—she has blazed a path that many politicians' wives have seen fit to follow.

Most of us remember, of course, that back in the days when Alf Landon was a contender for the Presidency, his wife was urged to play the part of the old-fashioned wife who knits by the fireside while her husband storms the hustings alone—all this by way of contrast to Mrs. Roosevelt.

Mrs. Willkie firmly declined to do any public speaking during the last presidential campaign, and apparently is hewing to the same line this time. The story goes that recently she was invited to a large gathering of Republican women and accepted on condition that she would not be asked to speak. But the chairman couldn't resist expressing the feeling of her audience by a last-minute urging that Mrs. Willkie respond, at least, to a greeting. The latter was given with many flourishes to fill the need of the large gathering for some kind of public demonstration.

Mrs. Willkie, flushed, then arose and said, "I'm glad I got here"... and sat down.

If the Republicans pick Thomas Dewey, it isn't likely that his wife, the former Frances Hutt of musical fame, will do any public speaking. Mrs. Douglas MacArthur is not given to platform appearances either. But time will tell which technique—the domestic or the public—brings in the most votes.

Presiding at today's opening class will be Mrs. Alexander Wiley, vice president of the Congressional Club and wife of Senator Wiley of Wisconsin. Others who will have a part on the program—all trained public speakers—will include Mrs. Robert Taft, wife of the Ohio Senator, and the following Representatives' wives—Mrs. Karl Le Compte of Iowa, Mrs. Emmet O'Neal of Kentucky, Mrs. J. Leroy Johnson of California, Mrs. Charles LaFollette of Indiana and Mrs. Paul Stewart of Oklahoma.

Miss Drexel Is Engaged to Wed

Of wide interest in Washington is the announcement by Mr. and Mrs. Louis C. N. Drexel of Walled Garden, Haverford, Pa., of the engagement of their daughter, Doreen, to Thomas W. Huber, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joel C. Huber of Haverford.

Miss Drexel, who was presented to Philadelphia society in the season of 1941-42, was born in London and lived there until her parents returned to this country in 1938. She was educated in England and at the Agnes Irwin School at Wynnewood, Pa. She is a nurse's aid at the Presbyterian Hospital in Philadelphia. She is a granddaughter of Sir Henry and Lady Dora Grayson of London and the late Col. Anthony J. Drexel of Philadelphia and Paris. She is a cousin of Mrs. David Bowes-Lyon of Washington.

Mr. Huber attended the Montgomery School at Haverford. He recently returned from eight months overseas with the American Field Service.

Dance at Gadsby's Tonight

The Officers' Dance Club of Alexandria will give its regular dance for officers of all branches of the armed forces from 9:30 to 12:30 o'clock tonight at Gadsby's Tavern. It is open to any officer desiring to attend. Mrs. Llewellyn Powell is president of the club. The dances are held every two weeks.

Mrs. Wadden Gives Wartime Luncheon

The second in a series of informal wartime luncheons was given yesterday by Mrs. Thomas Anthony Wadden, at the Congressional Club. The luncheon was in honor of Mrs. Jacob Devers, wife of General Devers, and included a small group of friends and members of the Diplomatic Corps.

In step with war restrictions and rationing, Mrs. Wadden has not planned any large parties, but will entertain small groups of friends throughout the year. The first of the series was given in honor of Mrs. Cameron Morrison, wife of Representative Morrison of North Carolina.

Yesterday Mrs. William Burgin, wife of Representative Burgin assisted Mrs. Wadden as cohostess at her second war luncheon. Assisting in the receiving were Mrs. Charles W. Tillett, National Democratic Committeewoman from North Carolina, and Mrs. Hargrove Bellamy, wife of Major Bellamy, also of North Carolina.

Miss Caroline Ihrie Pou Wadden, daughter of the hostess, also assisted, and Miss Edwina Pou Wadden, younger sister, dropped in after school to meet the guests.

Lee Memorial Foundation to Meet at Tea

Mrs. J. Harry Covington has issued invitations to the annual meeting of the Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation, the Washington Committee, and to the friends of Stratford in Washington on Sunday to hear an address by the Chief Justice of the United States Court of Appeals, the Hon. D. Lawrence Groner, and to remain for tea.

Mrs. Clarence A. Aspinwall is chairman of the Washington Committee. Mrs. Stanley F. Reed, Mrs. McCook Knox, Mrs. Frederick Brooke and Miss Elizabeth Houghton will assist at the tea table.

The progress of the restoration of the historic mansion and its broad acres as an example of Colonial plantation life will be described. Douglas Freeman, in an editorial in the Richmond News-Leader, commends the diary of the superintendent of the Stratford plantation, Maj. Gen. Benjamin F. Cheatham, USA, ret., in these words: "As we have said more than once, the diary of the remarkable resident superintendent of Stratford is the most interesting single day-by-day record it has been our privilege to see of the best type of modern farming in Virginia . . . No man who yearns for contact with the soil is apt to follow the general for a year and not purchase for himself a plantation, which he scarcely can manage as well as General Cheatham directs the old Lee estate, 'the living memorial of a great American line.'"

Mrs. Harry Hawes, national president, and Mrs. Casenove G. Lee, director of the foundation in the District of Columbia, will be present. Mrs. Howard Davidson, chairman of the St. Marys County Committee, and Mrs. Robert Fleming, chairman of the Montgomery County Committee, will also attend.

Mrs. Frank E. Evans From New Orleans Visits Old Friends

Mrs. Frank E. Evans, widow of Brigadier General Evans, USMC, who now makes her home in New Orleans, is here for several days and is visiting Comdr. and Mrs. Frederick R. Stickney, newcomers to Alexandria, Va.

Mrs. Evans will return to New Orleans the end of the week.

Following General Evans' retirement from active service, he and Mrs. Evans went to Honolulu, purchased a house which they called Sanctuary and which was the title of a book of which General Evans was the author. Mrs. Evans hopes to return to Honolulu at the end of the war. She is now doing Government war work in Louisiana.

Wake Island Hero Leads Charmed Life in Battle

By Jean Craighead

War makes heroes and good poker players. Heroes, when Americans resort to ingenuity and Yankee luck to outsmart the enemy—poker players when they are taking their minds off the grim terrors of war.

Lieut. Comdr. Mark Grant, USN, brother of Mrs. Ross A. Collins of Washington, was born with the silver spoon of wit and resourcefulness in his mouth in Meridian, Miss. However, he acquired his knack at poker some time later when he bumped up against his brother-in-law, the former Representative Ross A. Collins of Mississippi and discovered the judge's reputation at poker was no legend.

With these two well-balanced gifts from America, Lieutenant Commander Grant left Annapolis and was sent to Wake Island last October to engage in one of the unforgettable battles of the war.

The battle was just to his taste. He dove his plane after the Japs with all guns open, and didn't even give up when he ran out of ammunition. He was already for a nusiance raid, when a bullet killed his motor, and something heavy, and swift, jolted his stomach. "This is it," he thought.

Putting the Gruman Hellcat that he was piloting, down in the Pacific Ocean, he dove for his one-man life raft, just as the ocean claimed his fighter. It was then he reached for his stomach. But there was no wound. A .30-caliber bullet had struck one of the metal gadgets on his web gun belt and had not penetrated.

Thanking Providence, Mark made himself comfortable on the bosom of the Pacific Ocean and tried to remember the instructions he had been given for such emergencies. Fish. He threw out a couple of lines and waited for the instruction book description of "hundreds of pisces to rise to the bait. Not a bite.

Shoots Seagull

About this time a Jap bomber approached less than 1000 feet overhead. Anticipating a strafing, the American crawled under his camouflage tarpaulin and thought of home and cornbread muffins. The Japs, evidently, did not see the lone pilot, and the roar of the motor softened into the noises of the sea.

Relieved and happy, Comdr. Mark Grant though about his stomach and the fishing lines he had dipped into the oceanic larder. Still there was no food, so remembering the famous tales of Eddie Rickenbacker, he wondered about using some faith on a seagull. On the fourth day a lonesome gull winged in over the life raft. Mark knew that Providence took care of a great number of miracles, but he felt that it would facilitate things if he cooperated. He took out his rifle and shot the gull. However, Commander Grant does not agree with Rickenbacker that seagulls are delicious. "Frankly," he commented, "they are awful."

The food was bad, and the accommodations were worse: Commander Grant was just about ready to file complaint, when a voice called, "Hi, there, Navy!" "The sea plays devilish tricks," he thought. "Hi, there, Navy," the voice repeated. The pilot lifted his head and there in the dusk was a submarine!

Sub Finds Pilot

The rescue was swift and joyous. It was also a miracle. The sub was not supposed to be in those waters, but had been wandering there for some time on the chance of meeting the pilot. In two more hours, when night settled in, the captain was going to abandon the search and return to base.

Once aboard ship, well fed, and convalescing from exposure, the captain suggested to Commander Grant that they play a little poker to pass off their nervousness while cruising around the enemy waters.

The hours of poker in Mississippi and Washington with former Representative Collins came into their own. Not only did Commander Grant leave the ship healthy, well fed and relaxed but with his pockets bulging with cash.

Art Classes Are Opened To Wounded Servicemen

By Betty Ruth McDevitt

Hidden talents of our wounded servicemen back from the battlefronts and now convalescing at the Forest Glen, Md., annex of Walter Reed Hospital have been discovered to such an extent that for many of them it will mean new careers far different than they ever dreamed of—thanks to the services of Mrs. Walter B. Wells of Kensington, Md.

A portrait painter, Mrs. Wells serves as a volunteer, teaches art to soldiers recuperating in the once fashionable National Park Seminary, every Thursday afternoon under the Red Cross recreational program. Always a lover of art, it wasn't until 1930 after her daughter, Mrs. F. Charles Morey, was married, that Mrs. Wells quit her china painting to study seriously at the Art Institute in Chicago. Such famous artists, including Boris Annisfield, and Fred Grant, with whom she studied, brought out her talents at an age when most women would have been content to sit home and mind their grandchildren. Now she is thankful she has something worthwhile to offer in the war effort.

Hidden Talent Revealed

"It's surprising to see what the boys can do, once they learn to hold a piece of charcoal, crayon or sketch pencil," remarked Mrs. Wells as she described one lad who entered the class only when a buddy coaxed him along for company's sake. After the class was over the soldier said to the artist instructor, "Well, I didn't think I wanted to stay at all but now I wish I didn't have to leave." Another convalescent who before the war often modeled for a sculptor proved he had enough talent to continue in the art field. He had never tried sketching in his life, Mrs. Wells stated.

Live models who pose in everything from bathing suits to bridal gowns and old-fashioned costumes are brought by Mrs. Wells for subjects to draw. They are the Misses Marjorie Boyd, Sue Healy and Betsy Hooper, all attractive young girls from Kensington.

Without the help of her assistants, all volunteers, Mrs. Wells feels the classes would not be successful. While Mrs. Wells teaches, Mrs. Weston Valentine, Mrs. Jonathan Mitchell and Mrs. H. P. Hartshorn turn pages and help students who are physically handicapped.

Teaches Several Classes

Still another phase of the gracious, calm teacher is her weekly art class for adults and children in the Kensington Elementary School. Recently inaugurated by the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission to provide evening recreation for war-workers and their families, the class keeps Mrs. Wells busy every Thursday night as well.

Coming to Maryland from the Midwest nearly three years ago she helped curb juvenile delinquency in her community when just a newcomer. She organized a neighborhood art class for youngsters which eventually led to her conducting classes in the summer recreational program for youths throughout the entire town. With many requests to serve in adult educational programs in Washington, Mrs. Wells prefers to stay in Montgomery County and near to our men who will soon be released from service to their country.

Popular among her townsfolk, Mrs. Wells is vice president of the Women's Community Club of Kensington and according to club-members will probably be president next year.

Matching Luggage

FOR MEN AND WOMEN

There are three things to remember when purchasing new luggage. 1. It should be good-looking and reflect character. The first impression is the lasting one when you're traveling. Matched luggage gives a lasting impression. 2. It should be serviceable and built to withstand years of hard traveling. 3. It should be light in weight and no burden on your arms yet sturdy enough to serve you well. This fine matching luggage has all three requisites for better traveling.
